THIS SOCIETY combines the advantages of Mutual Assurance with Moderate Premiums.

THE PREMIUMS are so moderate that an Assurance of £1200 or £1250 may generally be secured from the first for the same yearly payment which would elsewhere assure (with profits) £1000 only—the difference being equivalent to an immediate and certain Bonus of 20 to 25 per cent.

The Whole PROFITS go to the Policyholders, on a system at once safe and equitable,—no share being given to those by whose early death there is a loss.

The effect of reserving the surplus for the survivors (who will, however, comprise more than half the members) has been that—in addition to the above immediate advantage—the older Policies have already received reversionary Bonuses of 40 to 70 per cent and upwards.

The next Investigation takes place in 1887.

* Thus, a person of 30 may secure £1000 at Death by a yearly payment, during life, of £20 : 15s. This Premium in any other of the Scottish Mutual Offices would secure £800 only, instead of £1000.

OR, if unwilling to burden himself with payments during whole life, he may secure the same £1000 by twenty-one yearly payments of £27 : 13 : 4—being thus free of payment after age 50.

† At age 40 the Premium ceasing at 60 is, for £1000, £33 : 14 : 2, about the same as most Offices require during the whole of life. Before that time the Policy will have shared in at least one division.

The New Business (entirely home) has for many years exceeded a Million.

The EXPENSES are much under those of any Office doing so large a New Business.

The Funds (increased in year by £323,000) exceed £5,500,000.

Only Two Offices in the Kingdom (both older) have as large a Fund.

POLICIES are generally free from restriction on residence after five years, and unchallengeable on any ground but fraud. They may be revived (after month of grace) on payment of premium and a moderate fine, within a year, without proof of health. In the case of death intervening, when the value exceeds the unpaid premium the full sum is payable, under deduction of arrears.

Claims payable One Month after proof—in most cases equivalent to immediate payment.

Full Explanations will be found in REPORTS, to be had on application.

CUTLER, PALMER, & Co.

DURING recent years the art of distillation in Scotland has developed into several distinct and recognised systems; and at the present day there are four distinct classes of spirits distilled, viz., Highland Malt, Lowland Malt, Patent Malt, and Grain, in each of which there are various grades of quality.

The Whiskey distilled north of the Grampians is styled "Highland Whiskey," and that south of this hill boundary "Lowland Whiskey." Highland Whiskey is the produce of numerous "sma' stills," worked for the most part upon the old original system of distillation, a process by which a much smaller extract is produced from a given quantity of grain as compared with the system of distillation prosecuted throughout the Lowlands of Scotland. Highland Whiskey is obtained from fine barley, fully malted, and from clear, soft, delicious mountain water. The barley is kiln-dried by peat fuel, which is cut from the mossy peats of the mountains, the whole process of distillation being conducted on a system embodying all that is natural and inartificial. Hence the marked superiority in character, style, and flavour of this highly appreciated beverage.

Lowland Malt is distilled on a much more extended scale. The system embraces all that science can give to produce quantity at the least possible cost. The grain used is mostly of inferior quality to that used in Highland stills, and the process is one of hurry and forcing. The quality and value of Lowland malt is, therefore, far short of Highland Whiskey; and the produce of such Lowland stills may be recognised by its rough, plain, general character, without the higher and delicate aroma of the Highland.

Patent Malt and Grain cannot be justly termed "Whiskey." These can be distilled from almost any unmalted grain and from other glutinous substances, and are distilled in large quantities for rectifying and mixing purposes. They fall short in value of the Lowland Malt.

From their much lower price, and from their greater nearness to the principal ports of shipment, Grain and Patent Malt, or blends of these and Lowland Malt, have hitherto, almost without exception, been exported to the colonies, &c.

Having, after our research and experiment, satisfied ourselves that Highland Malt Whiskey is the "original Scotch Whiskey," and the highest type of alcohol, we set ourselves to ascertain the condition under which it could be presented to the public in its best form; and we found that the connoisseurs of many years ago, recognising the exaggerated characteristics possessed by all the higher brands of real Mountain Dew, discovered that the judicious blending of the produce of various "sma' stills" secured a more perfect and palatable character to the spirits so treated, and that one strongly exaggerated character being met by others of a like, though opposite nature, the result was complete harmony, softness, fulness, and delicacy of style. We also found that, after selecting a blend of those "sma' stills" Highland Whiskeys, the next essential requirement was age. No artificial process of mellowing, or any system of double distillation, can give to the Whiskey the characteristics developed by time. This fact can be better understood when we explain that the produce of some distilleries mature in a shorter space of time than others, but all require several years to develop those delicate and beautiful ethers (or aroma) in which maturity consists.

The leading members of the Medical Profession are now unanimous in recommending High-Class Whiskey, naturally and thoroughly matured, as the most wholesome stimulant; and its value in this respect is daily becoming more widely understood, and its use increasing in a corresponding degree.

With these remarks, we have pleasure in announcing that we hold in bond, in London and Inverness, a very large stock of the produce of the most famed "sma' stills" in the Highlands of Scotland, blended and matured. These Whiskeys are matured in sherry wood, and have a yellowish or straw-coloured tinge, and are guaranteed entirely free from fusel oil and other noxious impurities, the natural attendants of imperfectly produced spirits.

We have resolved to identify ourselves with genuine Highland Malt Whiskey only; to select, blend, and store the same under a system that will enable us to ship this article of the highest possible type, uniform in style, and thoroughly matured.

The "Carlton" Whiskey has a great reputation in the principal London Club Houses; it is of rare quality, age, and excellence.

ADVERTISEMENT.

It will be seen that the present issue of the Almanack has been very greatly enlarged. The Editor found it impossible to satisfy the demands of his numerous correspondents without extending the work much beyond the limits originally assigned to it. Reluctant to take this step, he had endeavoured, by the most rigid economy of the space at his disposal, to keep each year's Almanack within the limits of its predecessor. Each year the effort was a failure, whilst the demands for amplifications and additions were as constantly increasing. A permanent extension of the size of the work was therefore unavoidable, and the supplementary portion, commencing on page 377, now reaches to page 632, an increase of 160 pages over the ordinary issue. Even with this substantial increase the Editor has to regret the omission of several important articles already in type.

The enlargement of the work has afforded an opportunity for entirely recasting its contents. Several of its most popular features have been extended; and by transferring to the Supplement portions of less general interest, space has been obtained for the insertion of additional matters of importance to all classes of readers.

The year of the Queen's Jubilee has been marked by an article in the Appendix, enumerating the chief events in Her Majesty's reign. One of the most momentous issues presented to the country during the past year was the proposal to rescind the Legislative Union with Ireland. The far-reaching consequence of such a measure elevates the instrument by which it was to be accomplished into a work of the utmost historic interest. In placing on record a convenient synopsis of the Irish Government and Land Bills, the twin measures are presented from the standpoint of their authors, and their merits or defects may therefore be judged accordingly.

What may be described as the Geographical section of the work has been thoroughly revised, and the portions relating to our Colonial Empire considerably enlarged. Many years before Imperial Federation became a theme of general concern, the Almanack annually endeavoured to enlist the sympathies of its readers in the affairs of the British Colonies and Dependencies, and may modestly claim to have assisted in awakening that interest in the subject which has at length been so completely aroused.

The Editor has again to thank his numerous Correspondents, not only for the correction of errors which had crept into the Almanack, but also for many valuable suggestions for its improvement. He trusts that the work may continue to merit their obliging attention, and that they will not fail to point out such faults of omission or of commission as they may observe. He is painfully conscious of many shortcomings, but by means of the enlargement now effected he trusts that the interest and usefulness of the Almanack has been increased to a corresponding degree.

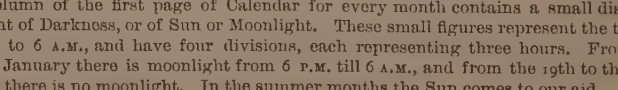
NOTE.—The Enlarged Edition of WHITAKER'S ALMANACK, price TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE, neatly half-bound, contains the whole of the Articles in this Index.

DURATION OF LIGHT AND DARKNESS.

THE second column of the first page of Calendar for every month contains a small diagram showing the amount of Darkness, or of Sun or Moonlight. These small figures represent the twelve hours from 6 P.M. to 6 A.M., and have four divisions, each representing three hours. From the 6th to the 11th of January there is moonlight from 6 P.M. till 6 A.M., and from the 19th to the 26th it will be seen that there is no moonlight. In the summer months the Sun comes to our aid.

THE DIAGRAMS USED ARE—



WHITAKER'S ALMANACK FOR 1887.

BEING THE THIRD AFTER BISSEXTILE OR LEAP YEAR, AND THE 50 AND 51 OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

In the early part of the month the constellations Camelopardus, Lynx, Gemini, Monoceros, and Canis Major will be on the meridian about midnight. In Gemini there is a fine compressed cluster of stars, in the right leg of Pollux; one third of the distance from Pollux to Rigel, on a line from the former star between the second and third stars of Orion's Belt to the latter; the stars composing it are, however, small, and excepting on the nights about the 23rd, in the absence of the Moon, cannot be well observed.

* The Meteorological Observations throughout the Almanack are those recorded at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich. They include the highest and lowest range of Thermometer, with the average for 50 years; the mean of Barometer at a height of 159 feet above the mean level of the sea; the daily Rainfall, also, as observed at Greenwich; and the direction and maximum force of the Wind.

ECLIPSES, OCCULTATIONS, AND OTHER CELESTIAL PHENOMENA.

February 1. Day breaks at 5*h.* 42*m.* morn., and Twilight ends at 6*h.* 46*m.* aft., the length of the Day being 9*h.* 6*m.*

Feb. 5. Mean time of Sun's semi-diameter passing the meridian, 1*m.* 7·6*s.*

Feb. 6. Saturn in conjunction with the Moon, 6*h.* morn. ♄ 3° 21′ N.

Feb. 8. Partial eclipse of the Moon, invisible at Greenwich, see p. 70.

Feb. 10. Venus and Mars in conjunction, 0*h.* morn. ♀ 0° 34′ S.

Feb. 20. Mean time of Sun's semidiameter passing the meridian, 1*m.* 6·0*s.*

Feb. 22. Annular eclipse of the Sun, invisible at Greenwich, see page 70.

Feb. 23. Mercury and Mars in conjunction, 4*h.* aft. ☿ 0° 32′ N.

Feb. 24. Mars in conjunction with the Moon, 3*h.* morn. ♂ 1° 4′ N.

Feb. 24. Mercury in conjunction with the Moon, 3*h.* morn. ☿ 1° 44′ N.

Feb. 24. Venus in conjunction with the Moon, 5*h.* aft. ♀ 1° 17′ N.

Feb. 25. Mercury in ascending Node, 1*h.* aft.

In this month the Mornings increase 51*m.*, and the Afternoons, 49*m.*

MORNING AND EVENING STARS.

☿ MERCURY is an evening star in the latter half of the month.

♀ VENUS is an evening star throughout the month: enters Pisces about the 17th.

♂ MARS is an evening star, not far from Venus.

♃ JUPITER nearly stationary between Virgo and Libra.

In the early part of this month the constellations Ursa Major, Lynx, Cancer, and a part of Hydra are on the meridian about midnight. In Cancer there is a rich loose cluster of stars situated in the Crab's southern claw, in R.A. 8*h.* 44*m.* 53*s.*, and Decl. 12° 15′ N., consisting of stars from the 9th to 10th magnitudes. The fine group of stars in Cancer, called "Præsepe," can be well observed about the 22nd. It does not consist of a very great number of stars, but the components are, as compared with those of other clusters, of considerable magnitude. It can be easily found by drawing an imaginary line from Castor through Pollux, and continuing it about three times the distance between these two stars: at this point it will reach the cluster.

The triple star ζ in Cancer may be examined in this month: it will be found situated in R.A. 8*h.* 5*m.* 39*s.*, and Decl. 18° 2′ N. It souths on the 22nd at 9*h.* 56*m.*, A.

* The days thus indicated throughout the Almanack are those on which High Tides may be expected. Strong northerly winds in the North Sea and a low barometer with heavy rains in the counties drained by the Thames, will probably cause a higher rise of the river and the low-lying riverside districts to be flooded. See Tides, p. 71

At the latter part of April the constellations Draco, Boötes, and Libra will be on the meridian about midnight, and will be most favourable for observation on the evenings between the 20th and 24th. An irresolvable double Nebula in Canes Venatici can be observed about the 22nd of the month: it is situated in R.A. 13*h.* 25*m.* 18*s.*, and in Decl. 47° 47′ N. The Southern Nebula is surrounded by a faint ring of nebulous light, and was called by Herschel, in his Catalogue, "the Halo Nebula." In Libra, R.A. 15*h.* 12*m.* 42*s.*, Decl. 2° 32′ N., is a very fine cluster of stars, condensed into great brilliancy towards the centre. Sir W. Herschel counted 200 stars in this group in the field of his 40-feet reflector, and found the middle portion so condensed that the individual stars could not be distinguished. The evenings about the 23rd are the best for observing these objects.

Towards the end of May we shall find the constellations Draco, Hercules, Ophiuchus, and Scorpio on the meridian about midnight.

Hercules contains a very splendid cluster of stars situated in R.A. 16*h.* 37*m.* 35*s.* and Decl. 36° 41′ N. This, like most of the star-clusters, is condensed in the centre, and may be easily seen with very moderate telescopic aid; and a few days before and after the 22nd of this month, when the Moon is absent, it may, if the opportunity is taken of a very clear night, be seen with the naked eye, plainly, between the stars ζ and η Herculis. This cluster, discovered by Halley in 1714, is one of the most beautiful examples of these bodies to be seen in the heavens.

In the last week of June, the constellations Draco, Lyra, a portion of Hercules, Scutum Sobieski, and a part of Sagittarius will south about midnight.

In Scutum Sobieski is situated a remarkable and very extensive Nebula, known as the "Horseshoe," from its peculiar shape: from μ Sagittarii it lies N. by E. about 7° distant, in R.A. 18*h.* 13*m.* 58*s.*, Decl. 16° 15′ S.

In Sagittarius is a globular cluster of very small stars, lying halfway between β Capricorni and Antares, and can be seen only with difficulty in small telescopes; it is situated in R.A. 18*h.* 17*m.* 26*s.* and Decl. 24° 56′ S. Owing to its great southern declination there is but little chance of seeing this Nebula except when southing. On the evenings about the 20th, when there is no Moon, it can be best observed. It souths at 0*h.* 42*m.* morn. on June 15.

Mean Longitude of Moon's ascending Node, July 1, 140° 58′ Ω.

ECLIPSES, OCCULTATIONS, AND OTHER CELESTIAL PHENOMENA.

July 1. There is no real night until after the 21st.

July 2. Earth at greatest distance from the Sun, 9h. morn.

July 5. Mean time of Sun's semidiameter passing the meridian, 1m. 8·4s.

July 6. A near approach of π Capricorni, magnitude 5, to the Moon. The least distance of Star from Moon's limb occurs at 9h. 3m. aft., 149° from the vertex.

July 13. Venus at greatest elongation East (45° 32′), 8h. aft.

July 17. Occultation of Aldebaran: magnitude 1. The disappearance takes place at 3h. 16m. morn., 139° from the vertex; the reappearance at 3h. 33m. morn., 172° from the vertex.

July 19. Mars in conjunction with the Moon, 5h. morn. ♂ 4° 18′ N.

July 20. Mean time of Sun's semi-diameter passing the meridian, 1m. 7·5s.

July 20. Saturn in conjunction with the Moon, 7h. aft. ♄ 2° 10′ N.

July 24. Venus in conjunction with the Moon, 4h. morn. ♀ 3° 8′ S.

July 27. Jupiter in conjunction with the Moon, 1h. morn. ♃ 3° 59′ S.

July 29. Mercury in inferior conjunction with the Sun, 5h. morn.

In this month the Mornings decrease 34m., the Afternoons, 29m.

MORNING AND EVENING STARS.

☿ MERCURY is an evening star in the first half of the month: nearly stationary in Cancer.

♀ VENUS is an evening star: in Leo, and near to Regulus on the 4th.

♂ MARS is a morning star: enters Gemini about the 12th.

♃ JUPITER is an evening star.

♄ SATURN is a morning star towards the end of the month.

In the middle of July the constellations Cygnus, Vulpecula, Aquila, and Sagittarius will be on the meridian about midnight.

The Annular Nebula in Lyra, situated between β and γ, is the chief of the Annular Nebulæ; the heavens containing, as far as is at present known, comparatively few examples of this class. It requires a rather good telescope to see it at all well: it is in R.A. 18*h.* 49*m.*, and Decl. 32° 53′ N.

There is also a globular cluster in Lyra, between the eastern yoke of Lyra's frame and the Swan's Head: it was formerly considered a Nebula, until resolved by Sir William Herschel, with his more perfect telescopic means. It is in R.A. 19*h.* 12*m.* 58*s.*, Decl. 29° 59′ N. The best nights in this month for observation of these objects are those about the 20th.

ECLIPSES, OCCULTATIONS, AND OTHER CELESTIAL PHENOMENA.

August 1, Day breaks at 1*h.* 30*m. morn.*, and Twilight ends at 10*h.* 41*m. aft.*, the length of the day being 15*h.* 22*m.*

Aug. 1. Occultation of 21 Sagittarii: magnitude 5. The disappearance takes place at 0*h.* 23*m. morn.*, 99° from the vertex; the reappearance at 1*h.* 29*m. morn.*, 323° from the vertex.

Aug. 3. A partial eclipse of the Moon, visible at Greenwich, see p. 70.

Aug. 5. Mean time of Sun's semidiameter passing the meridian, 1*m.* 6·1*s.*

Aug. 16. Venus at greatest brilliancy.

Aug. 16. Mercury at greatest elongation West (18° 36′), 8*h. aft.*

Aug. 17. Mars in conjunction with the Moon, 0*h. morn.* ♂ 3° 10′ N.

Aug. 17. Mercury in conjunction with the Moon, 9*h. aft.* ☿ 0° 33′ N.

Aug. 19. Total eclipse of the Sun, partly visible as a partial eclipse at Greenwich, see p. 71.

Aug. 20. Mean time of Sun's semidiameter passing the meridian, 1*m.* 4·9*s.*

Aug. 22. Venus at greatest distance from the Sun, 0*h. morn.*

Aug. 23. Jupiter in conjunction with the Moon, 1*h. aft.* ♃ 4° 12′ S.

Aug. 28. Mars and Saturn in conjunction, 5*h. aft.* ♂ 0° 49′ N.

In this month the Mornings decrease 47*m.*, the Afternoons 59*m.*

MORNING AND EVENING STARS.

☿ MERCURY is a morning star throughout the month: in Cancer till about the 22nd, when it enters Leo.

♀ VENUS is an evening star throughout the month.

♂ MARS is a morning star: in Gemini till about the 20th, when it enters Cancer.

♃ JUPITER is an evening star: situated in Virgo.

♄ SATURN is a morning star: situated in Cancer.

At the beginning of August, Cepheus, Cygnus, Vulpecula, Delphinus, and Capricornus south at midnight.

In Vulpecula is the famous "Dumb-bell" Nebula, generally considered irresolvable, although under the higher powers of Lord Rosse's telescope there seemed to be some trace of resolvability shown: it is nearly halfway between β Cygni and the Dolphin, close to the star 14 Vulpeculæ. The sky in the vicinity of this Nebula is very rich in stars and will well repay a complete examination. The best evenings in this month for observation are those about the 18th.

There is a small bright globular cluster below the Dolphin's tail, consisting of a mass of very small stars, not very easy for small telescopes; it is situated in R.A. 20h. 28m. 26s., and Decl. 7° 1′ N. This cluster is a good one, according to Sir John Herschel, for testing the space-penetrating power of telescopes. This though a small is yet a bright cluster, and may be observed easily in the evenings immediately before and after the 18th.

On the 1st of September, Cepheus, Pegasus, Aquarius, and Piscis Australis will be on the meridian at midnight.

In Pegasus, R.A. 21*h.* 24*m.* 26*s.*, and Decl. 11° 38′ N., is a very fine cluster of stars, between the mouths of Pegasus and Equuleus, much condensed towards the centre: there are many telescopic and several rather bright stars in the field. Aquarius contains a fine cluster of stars, condensed in the centre, and presenting a true globular form, consisting of very small stars very much compressed. It is situated in R.A. 21*h.* 27*m.* 26*s.*, and Decl. 1° 21′ S.

In the early evening, at the beginning of the month, the bright cluster in Capricornus, situated in R.A. 21*h.* 33*m.* 46*s.*, and Decl. 23° 41′ S., can be observed: it is rather bright, with a central condensation, and does not require great telescopic power to see it well. The best evenings for observation are those about the 17th.

October 1. Day breaks at 4*h.* 8*m.* morn., and Twilight ends at 7*h.* 31*m.* aft., the length of the Day being 12*h.* 36*m.*

Oct. 5. Mean time of Sun's semidiameter passing the meridian, 1*m.* 4·4*s.*

Oct. 6. Occultation of θ^1 Tauri: magnitude 4½. The disappearance takes place at 10*h.* 54*m.* aft., 350° from the vertex; the reappearance at 11*h.* 8*m.* aft., 325° from the vertex.

Oct. 6. Occultation of B.A.C. 1391: magnitude 5. The disappearance takes place at 11*h.* 45*m.* aft., 29° from the vertex; the reappearance on Oct. 7, at 0*h.* 40*m.* morn., 295° from the vertex.

Oct. 7. Occultation of Aldebaran: magnitude 1. The disappearance takes place at 3*h.* 20*m.* morn., 42° from the vertex; the reappearance at 4*h.* 2*m.* morn., 354° from the vertex.

Oct. 11. Occultation of ζ^1 Cancri: magnitude 4½. The disappearance takes place at 3*h.* 48*m.* morn., 343° from the vertex; the reappearance at 4*h.* 16*m.* morn., 299° from the vertex.

Oct. 13. Occultation of Regulus: magnitude 1½. The disappearance takes place at 4*h.* 44*m.* morn., 34° from the vertex; the reappearance at 5*h.* 50*m.* morn., 225° from the vertex.

Oct. 20. Mean time of Sun's semidiameter passing the meridian, 1*m.* 5·5*s.*

Oct. 24. Occultation of θ Capricorni: magnitude 4. The disappearance takes place at 4*h.* 32*m.* aft., 78° from the vertex; the reappearance at 5*h.* 52*m.* aft. 277° from the vertex.

In this month the Mornings decrease 51*m.*, the Afternoons, 1*h.* 4*m.*

MORNING AND EVENING STARS.

☿ MERCURY is an evening star in Virgo till the 11th, when it enters Libra.

♀ VENUS is a morning star: enters Virgo about the 25th.

♃ JUPITER is an evening star: situated in Libra.

♄ SATURN almost stationary in Cancer throughout the month.

On the 1st of October, Cassiopeia, Andromeda, Pisces, and Cetus are on the meridian at midnight; while Cancer and Orion are rising, and Hercules and Capricornus setting.

In Andromeda, just below the girdle, is a large and irresolvable Nebula. It is situated in R.A. 0*h.* 36*m.* 16*s.*, and Decl. 40° 35′ N. In Sept., 1885, a decided Stellar nucleus was observed in this Nebula in R.A. 0*h.* 36*m.* 31*s.*, Decl. 40° 38′ N.

A splendid group of stars may be observed in this month situated in the sword-handle of Perseus: it is a magnificent collection of stars, and on a fine night, without moonlight, such as the nights just before and after the 16th, affords one of the most brilliant telescopic objects in the heavens. One of the stars near the middle of the group is of a fine ruby colour; it is situated in R.A. 2*h.* 10*m.* 57*s.*, and Decl. 56° 35′ N.

On the 1st of November, Perseus, Aries, and Cetus are on the meridian at midnight.

An irresolvable Nebula on the right foot of Andromeda may be observed in this month. It was discovered by Miss Herschel, with a small reflecting telescope only twenty-seven inches in focal length. It is a very elongated Nebula, dark in the centre, and suggests the idea of a flat ring seen very obliquely. It is in R.A. 2*h.* 15*m.* 17*s.*, and Decl. 41° 47′ N. The best evenings are those about the 14th.

Neptune can be well observed in this month: on the 18th it passes the meridian, or souths, at 0*h.* 1*m.* morn., in R.A. 3*h.* 47*m.* 44*s.*, and Decl. 18° 11′ N.

On the 1st of December, at midnight, the constellations Camelopardus, Taurus, and Eridanus will be on the meridian.

In Taurus is a fine Nebula of a pearly white colour on the tip of the Bull's southern horn, in R.A. 5*h.* 27*m.* 37*s.*, and Decl. 21° 56′ N. This Nebula is the one known as the "Crab."

About the middle of the month Orion souths at midnight, and can be best observed in this month, although favourably situated in both November and January. This magnificent constellation contains the grandest of all the Nebulæ, situate in the Sword-Scabbard. A line drawn from α Orionis through ζ, the third star of the belt, will pass over θ Orionis and the Nebula. It can be seen with the naked eye. Evenings about the 14th are the best.

EXAMPLE 1.—Required the time of high water at Aberdeen on January 15th:—

Time of high water at London Bridge	5*h.* 40*m.*	Morn.
Subtract tide interval	0 58
Time of high water at Aberdeen	4 42	Morn.

EXAMPLE 2.—Required the time of high water at Scarborough on January 15th:—

Time of high water at London Bridge	5*h.* 40*m.*	Morn.
Add tide interval	2 13
Time of high water at Scarborough	7 53	Morn.

It may happen that the "tide interval" to be subtracted is greater than the quantity from which it has to be taken, in which case 12 hours must be added to the London Bridge time; the resulting difference will be the preceding day's afternoon tide where the London morning tide was used. Sometimes the sum "high water at London Bridge" + "tide interval" will exceed 12 hours; in this case, the excess will be the time of high water after the noon or midnight following, according as the London high water was either morning or afternoon.

EXAMPLE 3.—Required the time of high water at Aberdeen, January 7th, aft.:—

Time of high water at London Bridge on January 8th + 12 hours	19*h.* 19*m.*	Morn.
Subtract tide interval	0 58
Time of high water at Aberdeen, Jan. 7th	11 21	After.

To use this Table, take the Sun's declination in the left-hand column, and under the required latitude on the horizontal line will be found the apparent time of Sunset. Subtract the quantity found as above from 12h., and the remainder will be the apparent time of Sunrise.

This Table is arranged for Northern latitudes, but will serve equally well for Southern latitudes by changing the declination from North to South, and vice versâ.

The local mean time of the observed altitude, when reduced to the corresponding Greenwich mean time, may be converted into sidereal time by means of the table on next page. It will be observed that the sign on the left-hand side of the correction in Table I. is to be used when the argument is on the left, and vice versâ; + means that the correction is to be added to, and − that it is to be subtracted from the reduced altitude. The corrections derived from the double-entry Tables II. and III. are always added. From the reduced altitude should be subtracted 1′, as 1′ has been included in Table III. to render it always positive.

The Sidereal Time required is equal to the Sidereal Time at the preceding Noon, added to the Equivalent to the given Mean Time.

Let it be required to find the sidereal time corresponding to the mean time 21*h.* 15*m.* 30·5*s.* on November 2:—

			H. M. S.
Sidereal Time at Noon on November 2			14 45 46
Mean Time intervals and equivalents from table above	21*h.*	=	21 3 26·99
	15*m.*	=	15 2·46
	30*s.*	=	30·08
	0·5	=	0·50
Corresponding Sidereal time		=	12 4 46·03

This table may also be used to show the acceleration of sidereal on mean solar intervals, by subtracting the mean time arguments from their sidereal equivalents.

The Days of the Roman Month.

In the Roman (Julian) calendar the months corresponded exactly with our own, excepting that down to the time of the great Emperor Augustus, the fifth and sixth months of the year—which, with the Romans, began with March—were called Quintilis and Sextilis; afterwards they were named in honour of the emperors, Julius and Augustus.

In reckoning the days of each month three fixed points were taken, and any particular day was said to be so many days before the next coming fixed day. These three points were (1) the Kalends, by which name the first of each month was known; (2) the Nones, which fell on the seventh day of the month in March, May, July, and October, and on the fifth day in each of the other months; and the Ides, which always fell eight days after the Nones.

For example, the 1st of January was the Kalends of January (Kalendis Januariis), the 31st of December was the day before the Kalends of January (pridie Kalendas Januarias); but Dec. 30th was the third day before the Kalends of January (die tertio ante Kalendas Januarias), in this case both Jan. 1st and Dec. 31st being included in the reckoning. And so on back to Dec. 14th, which was the nineteenth day before the January Kalends (die undevicesimo ante Kal. Jan.), Dec. 13th being Idibus Decembribus, the Ides of December. In Leap-year, both Feb. 24th and Feb. 25th were known as the sixth day before the March Kalends, being distinguished respectively as prior and posterior.

Previous to 1752 the above dates are computed from the Old Style. Those printed in heavier type are leap-years. 1752 had E D up to September 2, but A from September 14 to December 31, the intermediate days being dropped for the change of Style. Its Easter was the last in Old Style. Until then also the years were considered to begin on March 25; but that, as it did not affect the date of Easter, is not noticed in this Table. The Table of Moveable Feasts in the Prayer-Book gives all the others after finding Easter in this. The Sunday Letters in the Calendar then enable any one to count the days of the week from Sunday. The tables in the Prayer Book before the change of style are erroneous.

The French Republican Calendar.

This, although reckoned from the 22nd September, 1792, was not introduced until the 22nd November, 1793. It remained in use only till the 31st December, 1805. The Gregorian Calendar was restored January 1st, 1806 (Nivôse 10, Year XIV.). The months varied in different years, thus Nivôse 1 commenced December 21st in 1793, December 22nd in 1795, December 21st in 1796, December 22nd in 1799, December 23rd in 1803, and December 22nd in 1804 and 1805. The following are the dates for the year 1804, the last complete year of the Calendar:—

Vendémaire	(Vintage),	23 Sept. to Oct. 22	Germinal	(Budding),	22 Mar. to Apr. 21
Brumaire	(Foggy),	23 Oct. to Nov. 22	Floréal	(Flowery),	21 April to May 20
Frimaire	(Sleety),	22 Nov. to Dec. 21	Prairial	(Pasture),	21 May to June 20
Nivôse	(Snowy),	22 Dec. to Jan. 21	Messidor	(Harvest),	20 June to July 19
Pluviôse	(Rainy),	21 Jan. to Feb. 20	Thermidor	(Hot),	20 July to Aug. 19
Ventôse	(Windy),	20 Feb. to Mar. 19	Fructidor	(Fruit),	19 Aug. to Sept. 18

The months were divided into three decades of ten days each, but to make up the 365, five were added at the end of September; (Primidi), dedicated to Virtue; (Duodi) to Genius; (Tridi), to Labour; (Quartidi), to Opinion; and the 5th (Quintidi) to Rewards. To Leap Year, called Olympic, a sixth day, the 22nd or 23rd September (Sextidi), "Jour de la Révolution," was added. This variation of dates has led to considerable confusion, but those who may wish to trace the fourteen years will find some very elaborate tables in the English ed. of Bourienne's "Life of Napoleon": Bentley.

The time given throughout this Almanack, with the one exception of that of High Water at Dublin, is Greenwich Mean Time, or the time which should be shown by a well-regulated clock; the column headed "Sun before or after Clock" gives the difference between this and apparent time, or the time as shown by the Sun.

In all cases where Noon is used, mean Noon is to be understood.

Conjunction.—A Planet is in Conjunction with another body when it has the same longitude, and is seen in the same direction in the heavens. This state may happen to all the Planets; those whose orbits lie between the Sun and Earth, as well as those whose orbits are exterior to that of the Earth—the former class being called inferior, and the latter superior Planets. It is obvious that in the case of the inferior Planets this Conjunction will be of two kinds: the one when the Planet is between the Earth and the Sun, called inferior Conjunction; and the other when at the opposite point of its orbit, with the Sun between the Planet and the Earth, called superior Conjunction. The latter is the only kind of Conjunction that can happen to the superior Planets, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune; the inferior Planets, Mercury and Venus, being subject to both positions.

Opposition.—A Planet is said to be in Opposition when it is distant from the Sun 180° of longitude, at which time it is most brilliant, souths about midnight, and is, generally, at its least distance from the earth. This can only be said of Planets whose orbits are exterior to that of the Earth.

Elongation.—The inferior Planets, in their revolutions round the Sun, appear to an observer on the Earth to swing pendulum-like from side to side, being alternately east and west of the Sun; the greatest Elongation is the termination of one of the swings, either east or west; and at these times the Planet appears, when viewed through a telescope, like the Moon in her first quarter if the Elongation be in the east, and like her last quarter if west. Both Mercury and Venus exhibit these phases, passing from new to full while moving from inferior to superior Conjunction, and from full to new again while passing from superior to inferior Conjunction.

Occultation.—It often happens that the Moon in her orbital motion passes before, and hides from a spectator on the Earth, some of the Fixed Stars, and occasionally one or other of the Planets; these occurrences are called Occultations. Among the "Celestial Phenomena" are given the times at which certain of these Occultations take place, as well as the exact point on the Moon's limb where the observer is to look for the phenomenon; this point is reckoned from the vertex, or highest upper portion of the Moon's image, towards the right hand, as seen in an inverting telescope, counting continuously from 0° up to 360°. The disappearance always takes place on the right-hand side of the moon, and the reappearance on the left, when viewed through an inverting or astronomical telescope. Stars to the fifth magnitude only have been included in this work. Should the instrument used be of the non-inverting kind, the vertex may still be used as the point to count from, and in the same direction, only adding 180° to the distance given from vertex for the inverting telescope if the number be less than 180°, and subtracting 180° if greater; bearing in mind, in this case, that the disappearances will take place on the left-hand side of the Moon's image, and the reappearances on the right.

Southing.—The Time of Southing is the time at which the heavenly bodies pass the Meridian, and is so called because they are then due south. The Meridian being a great circle passing through the Pole and Zenith of the place, the southing will also be the time when they attain their greatest altitude above the horizon.

ECLIPSES.

In the year 1887 there will be two Eclipses of the Sun and two of the Moon.

I. A partial Eclipse of the Moon, Feb. 8, invisible at Greenwich. First contact with the shadow takes place at 9*h.* 14*m.* morn., Mean Time at Greenwich, 52° from the most northern point of the Moon's limb counting towards the East; the last contact takes place at 11*h.* 30*m.* morn., Mean Time at Greenwich, 27° from the most northern point of the Moon's limb counting towards the West. Magnitude of the Eclipse 0·43 (Moon's diameter = 1).

II. An annular Eclipse of the Sun, February 22, invisible at Greenwich. Begins on the Earth generally at 6*h.* 41*m.*, aft., Greenwich Mean Time, in longitude 165° East of Greenwich, and latitude 38° South. Central Eclipse at noon 9*h.* 13*m.* aft., in longitude 135° West of Greenwich, and latitude 49° South. Ends on Earth generally on Feb. 23, 0*h.* 25*m.* morn., in longitude 92° West of Greenwich, and latitude 7° South.

III. A partial Eclipse of the Moon, August 3, visible at Greenwich.

First contact with the Penumbra	6*h.* 12*m.* aft.
First contact with the shadow	7*h.* 36*m.* aft.
Middle of the Eclipse	8*h.* 49*m.* aft.
Last contact with the shadow	10*h.* 2*m.* aft.
Last contact with the Penumbra	11*h.* 26*m.* aft.

Magnitude of the Eclipse 0·42 (Moon's diameter = 1).

The first contact with the shadow takes place at 130° from the most northern point of the Moon's limb, counting towards the East; the last contact with the shadow at 151° from the same point, counting towards the West.

At Greenwich, the first contact with the Shadow occurs as the Moon is rising.

IV. A total Eclipse of the Sun, August 19, partly visible as a partial Eclipse at Greenwich. Begins on the Earth generally at 3*h.* 5*m.* morn., Mean Time at Greenwich, in longitude 34° East of Greenwich, and latitude 37° North. Central Eclipse begins generally at 4*h.* 11*m.*, morn., in longitude 11° East of Greenwich, and latitude 52° North. Ends on Earth generally at 7*h.* 59*m.* morn., in longitude 153° East of Greenwich, and latitude 10° North.

At Greenwich the Sun rises partially eclipsed at 4*h.* 53*m.* morn., and Eclipse ends at 5*h.* 7*m.* morn., Mean Time at Greenwich.

At Edinburgh the Sun rises partially eclipsed at 4*h.* 40*m.* morn., and the Eclipse ends at 4*h.* 59*m.* mean time at Edinburgh.

MAGNETIC ELEMENTS.

Instead of predicting the values of the magnetic elements for the current year of the Almanack, it appears that it would be a more useful arrangement to give, as in the following table, the actually observed values of these elements for the last six years, leaving our readers to draw from them their own inferences as to the values for the current year.

Year.	Mean Magnetic Declination at Greenwich West.	Annual Variation.	Mean Inclination or Dip of Needle at Greenwich.	Annual Variation.
	° ′	′	° ′	′
1880	18 32·6	7·9	67 35·6	1·3
1881	18 27·1	5·5	67 34·6	1·0
1882	18 22·3	4·8	67 34·1	0·5
1883	18 15·0	7·3	67 31·6	2·5
1884	18 8·0	7·0	67 30·0	1·6
1885	18 1·7	6·3	67 27·8	2·2

As regards the amount of accuracy which may be expected in assuming a value for the magnetic declination at any place and time, we cannot do better than quote the opinion of Mr. Ellis, the Superintendent of the Magnetical and Meteorological Department at Greenwich, as expressed in a letter to the editor of the Colliery Guardian of June 2, 1882. After speaking of the disturbance of the needle by magnetic storms, he goes on to say, that "at any particular hour of the day the value of the magnetic declination at that hour, through a month, may vary at times as much as from 5′ to 10′. Besides which, the mean value of magnetic declination for any particular place in England at which no magnetic observations are made can in general only be inferred from the map prepared by the late Sir F. Evans, R.N., Hydrographer to the Admiralty, and given in vol. 162 of the Philosophical Transactions, making allowance for the change which has since occurred (the map is for the year 1872), according to the best available data. Values found in this way are therefore approximations only."

The diurnal variation of magnetic declination at Greenwich is about 12′ in summer and 7′ in winter. The needle occupies its mean position about 10*h.* A.M., and again about 6*h.* P.M., throughout the year. It reaches its most westerly position at about 2*h.* P.M., and its most easterly position during the night or early morning, according to the season of the year.

THE TIDES.

In order to understand the action of the Moon on our Earth as a Tide-producing body, we will suppose that the Earth consists of a smooth sphere, covered all over with water of a uniform depth, and that both bodies are at rest with respect to each other; then, the attraction of the Moon on the water nearest to her will be greater than her attraction on the solid Earth, and will cause a heaping-up of the water towards her. This appears natural enough; but, at first sight, it does seem somewhat paradoxical that the water should also be heaped-up in a direction opposite to the Moon. This is explained by the fact that the water, on the side away from the Moon, is attracted less than the solid ball of the Earth; and the latter is, as it were, drawn away from the water; thus causing the liquid to be swelled up, although not quite to the same extent as on the other side; because, its distance being greater than in the first case, the moon-attraction is less.

Although the Sun is at a much greater distance from the Earth than the Moon, yet, from its very much greater mass, it exerts a considerable influence in producing the tides of the Ocean, and acts on the water in precisely the same manner as does the Moon, producing another spheroid of equilibrium, with its major axis in a line joining the Earth and Sun. The heaping-up of the waters, due to the Sun, is two-fifths of that due to the Moon; and if the Sun and Moon, as seen from the Earth, were separated by an angle of 90°, the axes of the wave spheroids would be separated by that quantity, and (if the three bodies were at rest with respect to each other) so they would remain. But since these conditions do not obtain in Nature, and the Earth, Moon, and Sun, instead of being at rest with regard to each other, are constantly changing their relative positions and distances (the Earth at the same time revolving on her axis), these motions never give the water time to assume the spheroidal shape. Instead of this, an imperfect form of it travels round the globe in a lunar day, which being on an average about 50 minutes more than the solar day, causes the Tides to come later, each successive day, by about that quantity. It will be seen, from what has been already said, that when the Sun, Moon, and Earth are in the same straight line, the solar and lunar waves are coincident—that is, the Sun and Moon are acting in concert; and the consequence will be, that the Tides about this time will rise higher, and fall lower, than they do when the Sun and Moon are at right angles to each other. When this latter condition obtains, their action is antagonistic, and we have a Tide that never rises so high, nor falls so low, as in the former case: that is to say, the highest, or spring Tides, happen at the full and new moons; the lowest, or neap, at the first and last quarters.

The rise of water which takes place in tidal rivers is not due to the direct action of the Moon on their waters, but is, in consequence of the change of level in the surface of the Ocean, caused by the tidal wave passing the mouth of the river.

It remains to be noticed that the direction of strong winds, as well as the varying pressure of the atmosphere, considerably affects both the times and the heights of high water. Thus, in the North Sea a strong N.N.W. gale and a low barometer raise the surface 2 or 3 feet, and cause the tide to flow all along the coast from the Pentland Firth to London half an hour longer than the time set forth in the Tables. Easterly, S.E. and S.W. winds produce opposite effects, which will be felt as far down the Channel as Dungeness. On the contrary, at the entrance of the Channel, at Plymouth, and as far up as Portland, south-westerly winds, with a low barometer, raise the surface of the water; and north-easterly winds and a high barometer always lower it.

OUR SEASONS.

The revolution of the Earth in its annual orbit round the Sun has the effect of causing the latter body, seemingly, to describe a complete revolution among the Stars in the course of the year; and this would give rise to no other phenomenon if the plane of this apparent path had been parallel to the Earth's Equator: the Sun would simply appear to occupy different positions among the Stars from day to day; the Days and Nights would be equal all over the Globe, and each place on the Earth would have one constant Season, the character of which would depend on its geographical latitude. Instead of this coincidence of planes, the Equator and Ecliptic (as this apparent path of the Sun is called) are mutually inclined to each other at 23½°; consequently, the Sun is alternately seen above and below the Equator by this amount, causing varying Seasons on the Globe, and Days and Nights of very unequal duration; long days and Summer to the Northern hemisphere when the Sun is North of the Equator, and vice versâ when South of it.

This inclination of the two planes will cause the Sun to cross the Equator twice in the year, viz., once in the Spring, and again in the Autumn, at which times the Days and Nights are equal all over the world; and we experience for a day or two what would be the constant state of our climate if the Sun moved in a plane coincident with the Equator.

From Spring, through Summer to Autumn, the Sun traverses exactly one half of the Ecliptic, and from Autumn, through Winter to Spring, the other half; but that these halves are not travelled over in equal times will be seen by an inspection of the times at which the different Seasons commence. It appears that the Sun is longer in performing the Summer than the Winter half; this is caused by the eccentricity of the Earth's orbit, and the Law of Areas, as it is called by Astronomers—a law which requires that an imaginary line, joining the Earth and Sun, shall sweep over equal areas in equal times. To do this, the Earth when nearer to the Sun, as at the Winter Solstice, must move more quickly than when farther away, at the Summer Solstice; because then the line joining the two bodies is shorter than in the latter case; the effect is to detain the Sun about eight days longer in the Northern than in the Southern Hemisphere.

The Earth's atmosphere is generally supposed to extend some forty miles in height, probably very much farther, but becoming, at only a few miles from the surface, of too great a tenuity to support human life. The condition and motions of this vast aërial ocean play a most important part in the determination of climate, modifying, by absorbing, the otherwise intense heat of the Sun; and when laden with clouds, hindering the Earth from radiating its acquired heat into space. The amount of heat absorbed in its passage through the atmosphere will depend upon the thickness of the stratum which the rays have to penetrate, and this on the meridian altitude of the Sun.

If the surface of the Globe were smooth, and consisted entirely of land or water, the mean temperature of our Seasons would depend solely on our geographical latitude, and we should then find that all places on the same parallel would enjoy the same temperatures; but being, as it is, made up of water and land, very unequally distributed, the former occupying two-thirds of the entire surface of the Globe, we have the temperature of the Seasons of places on the same parallel of latitude greatly modified by the surrounding masses of land and water. The great capacity of water for heat, and its low power of radiation, make the great Ocean, extending from Pole to Pole, the reservoir which stores up for us the heat it has received from the Sun; while the land, radiating again its heat very quickly, would soon grow cold. The principal medium by which this heat is conveyed to the land is that of the Winds, which, receiving their warmth and moisture from the water, pass over the land, and compensate for the loss of heat which the latter suffers from radiation. From this cause it is that islands enjoy more equable Seasons than inland countries, being neither so cold in Winter nor so hot in Summer; since the same clouded skies that retard the cooling of the land by radiation, also shield it from the rays of the Sun in Summer. But in the interior of continents where the winds have been robbed of their moisture on their passage from the coast, the fiercest extremes are known to prevail between the Summer and Winter temperatures. Moscow has a difference between its Summer heat and Winter cold of 82°, London of 57°, while in the Shetland Islands, and at Penzance, in Cornwall, the differences are only 46° and 48° respectively. Beyond the fact of the presence of water, we must not forget that the oceans and seas are traversed by currents of warm water from the Equatorial regions, which greatly promote the distribution of heat. The chief of these prevail in the North Atlantic Ocean, and it is to one of them—the Gulf Stream—that we in a great measure owe the mildness of the western coasts of Europe. This remarkable current, issuing from the Gulf of Mexico, flows in a north-easterly direction along the shores of America, and on encountering the Banks of Newfoundland, splits into two branches, one of which proceeds to the Azores, and the other to the British Isles.

THE ASTEROIDS, OR SMALL PLANETS.

Besides the Planets whose Risings, Settings, &c., are given in this Almanack, there are a vast number of small bodies revolving round the Sun, whose orbits lie between those of Mars and Jupiter.

The mean distances of the Planets from the Sun all increase, outwards, in a certain progression; excepting that between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter there exists a greater gap than, according to this law, there should be. Kepler suggested that there was, perhaps, another Planet between Mars and Jupiter, not at that time discovered. This idea, at the beginning of the present century, was warmly taken up by the German astronomers, and they formed themselves into a society for the purpose of searching for the suspected Planet. The Planet was found very soon after, although not by one of the newly-formed Society, but by the Italian astronomer Piazzi, who gave it the name of Ceres.

As far as its orbit and position in space were concerned, this addition to the planetary family agreed very well with the predicted Planet; but it was extremely small, having a linear diameter of little more than 150 miles! About a year after this another was discovered by Olbers, who gave to it the name of Pallas. This was a still smaller body, its linear diameter being some 50 miles less than that of Ceres. Two years later, while constructing Star Charts, Harding, of Lilienthal, discovered the third of the series, on which he conferred the name of Juno, a Planet still smaller than Pallas. After some three years spent in searching the heavens, Olbers discovered his second member of the now immense family, and Gauss gave it the name of Vesta. No more were found until Hencke, at the end of 1845, discovered Astræa; then, with but little intermission up to the present time, each year has seen several new members added to the system, making at this time, November 1, 1886, a total of 260. For a complete list of these bodies see p. 79.

VARIABLE STARS.

Although the Stars generally shine with uniform brightness, there are among them some remarkable exceptions to this general rule. The earliest known and the most remarkable amongst this class of Stars is one situated in the constellation Cetus, and known by the name of o Ceti, or Mira Ceti. It has a period of nearly 331 days; that is to say, it goes through its cycle of variations in that length of time, continuing for about twelve or fourteen days at its maximum brightness, which has, at some of its maxima, reached to the second order of magnitude; it then goes on decreasing for some three months, until it becomes invisible, in which condition it remains for five more months, when it again goes on increasing to the end of the period, when the maximum is again reached; but the order of magnitude is not always the same at successive maxima. It is recorded, in Lalande's "Astronomy," that between the years 1672 and 1676 this Star was not visible at all. The month of October is the best time for observing it. It passes the meridian at midnight about the 24th, and will be found in R. A. 2*h.* 13*m.* 34*s.* and South Declination 3° 33′.

Another remarkable variable Star is Algol, β Persei. This has a very short period, not quite three days—and ranges from the second to the fourth magnitude. It continues at its maximum for two days and a half, then begins to decrease very suddenly, and in rather more than three hours is reduced to a star of the fourth magnitude; after remaining at this magnitude for a quarter of an hour, it again attains to its maximum, in the same time that it took in passing from it to the minimum. This Star will be found in Right Ascension 3*h.* 0*m.* 41*s.* and North Declination 40° 31′. It can be well observed in October and November. It souths about midnight on November 5.

The variable Star β Lyræ is remarkable in having a double period, viz., two maxima and two minima—the double period being very nearly equal to thirteen days; the difference between the maximum and minimum is only one degree of magnitude. There is another peculiarity in the changes of this Star—that, although the two maxima are equal, the minima are unequal. It is situated in R. A. 18*h.* 45*m.* 50*s.* and North Declination 33° 14′. The best time for observing it is in the months of June and July.

The Star δ Cephei is also subject to considerable variations in magnitude, passing from the third to the fifth with a period of 5⅓ days. In passing from the minimum to the maximum, it occupies less time than that required for it to reach the minimum again—in the proportion of 38 hours to 91. It is to be found in R. A. 22*h.* 24*m.* 54*s.* and North Declination 57° 50′. August and September are the best months in which to observe it.

There are two hypotheses suggested to explain the phenomena exhibited by the variable or periodical Stars; one of which endeavours to account for the variations in magnitude by supposing that opaque bodies are revolving around these particular Stars, and that at certain times they are interposed between the Earth and the Star, and so cut off from us a portion of the luminous rays of the latter. The other hypothesis suggests that the Stars themselves may have portions of their surface of unequal reflecting power, and that in their revolutions they present to us in turns these more or less bright parts, and so cause the variations that we observe. This theory fails to explain the changes observed in the stars of the Algol type, and is only applicable to such as are quite regular in their fluctuations. Professor Pickering has shown that none of the theories put forward to account for the variability of the light of such stars as Algol will satisfy the observed changes, except that of an opaque satellite. Adopting this theory in his paper on Algol, he finds theoretically such a satellite whose position and movements would agree with the observed facts.

The above-mentioned "variables" are but a very small portion of the Stars which are known to experience fluctuations of magnitude, but they are the most celebrated examples of their class. In this department of Astronomy much valuable work has been done by amateurs, and it is one which yet offers a field for farther exertions.

TERRESTRIAL MAGNETISM.

Magnetism is that property possessed by certain bars of steel, called Magnets, of attracting pieces of iron and also other magnets; beyond this idea very little, if any, meaning is popularly attached to the term Magnetism.

Every magnet has two poles, each pole having, as the term implies, exactly opposite properties, such that if we suspend one magnet by a thread free to move in any direction, it will be found that on bringing another magnet, held in the hand, near to one end of the suspended magnet, if the poles of each are of like properties, they will repel each other, but if of unlike, they will be attracted towards each other. By placing the magnet held in the hand in the proper position, the movable magnet may be made to take up any required direction, as long as the magnetism in the magnets and their relative positions remain the same. In the Mariner's

Compass we have a case of this kind, where the compass-needle is so suspended as to be free to move in the horizontal direction, the Earth itself being the other magnet, with its South Pole near to the Earth's North Pole, and its North Pole near to the Earth's South Pole; so that the North Pole of the compass will always point to the Magnetic North Pole of the Earth, differing from the true or Astronomical North by a quantity called the "Variation." It is this property of magnets which renders the compass so valuable an instrument in navigation. The Variation of the compass is not only different for different places on the Earth, but is moreover liable to slow variation from year to year, causing it in the course of centuries to oscillate from East to West of the Astronomical meridian. In 1580, at London, the needle had an Eastern declination of about 11½°; between 1657 and 1662, its direction coincided with the plane of the Astronomical meridian; that is to say, the declination was zero; since then it travelled westwards, and reached the maximum Western declination in 1815, and is at the present time (1887) approaching the zero, previously to again becoming Easterly.

The compass-needle being constructed to move in a horizontal direction only, exhibits that component of the total magnetic force which determines the declination; but if the needle had been mounted on a horizontal axis placed in the magnetic meridian, and being left free to move in a vertical plane, it would have been found to Dip, as it is technically called, or be inclined at an angle to the horizontal plane, the North Pole of the needle being depressed. The value of this inclination or dip varies also in different places on the globe, increasing towards the Poles, so that in the Northern Hemisphere, at the Magnetic Pole, we shall have the north end of the needle pointing directly downwards.

This North Magnetic Pole was found by Sir James Ross to be situate in 97° West longitude and 70° North latitude. The South Magnetic Pole is situated about 168° East longitude and 76° South latitude. Between these points there are found places of no dip; all such places are said to be situated on the Magnetic Equator, a plane not far removed from the terrestrial Equator. The dip, like the declination, is subject to secular and other variations, the true laws of which are not yet understood, but for the investigation of which Observatories have been established all over the world, and elaborate series of observations made on the motions of variously suspended magnets (their movements in many Observatories being automatically recorded by photography), furnishing a continuous record from hour to hour, and year to year, of the forces acting upon them.

FORECASTING THE WEATHER.

The great bearing which the weather has on human pursuits very early led mankind to study it with a view, if possible, of predicting its nature, and obtaining warning of those violent atmospheric disturbances which not only strew our narrow seas with wrecks, but also render nugatory, in a greater or less degree, the labours of the farmer.

The bases on which the earlier meteorologists founded their predictions were various, the phases of the Moon being generally supposed to have much to do with it. An examination of the Greenwich Observations for more than half a century proved the complete fallacy of this theory. Such weather prophets as Moore and Zadkiel, in their almanacks, claimed to be able to predict the weather, day by day, for a whole year; but meteorological science, as far as it goes at the present time, has shown that, in the British Isles, the weather cannot with any certainty be forecast for more than three or four days at farthest.

Depressions on the surface of the great aërial ocean surrounding the globe are marked by the barometer, and observation shows that the winds always blow towards the place of the lowest barometer reading; now, if an observer could see at one glance all the barometer readings over a large area of country, he would be enabled to trace the march of the storm, and, by means of the telegraph, give warnings to those places where the storm may be expected. This was the method adopted some years ago by the late Admiral Fitzroy, and is found to be the most trustworthy method on which weather predictions can be based. Our nearness to the Atlantic Ocean greatly interfered, for want of more westerly barometer readings, with the power of forecasting for more than two or three days, and generally for a much shorter time than this, as most of the storms that visit the western coasts of Europe travel from the south-west towards the north-east, with a greater or less velocity, varying from 20 to 40 miles an hour.

As might have been expected, the connection of the Old and New Worlds by means of electric cables has given much greater facilities for storm-warnings. Many of the great storms which burst upon our coasts appear to have had their origin in the American continent. The great area from which the United States' signal service can collect their data enables the American meteorologists to predict with very considerable certainty the time when such storms may be expected here; and not only that one may be looked for, but also the particular character of the visitation.

It may sometimes happen that they do not exhibit quite such features as we were led to expect; may not, in fact, be the identical storms; but the wonder rather is, that they should traverse 3,000 miles and not differ greatly from what they were some four or five days earlier, when leaving the coasts of America.

In some cases the predicted storms do not present themselves to us at all: they seem to have spent their force in the course of their journey over the Atlantic Ocean; while, on the other hand, we have the testimony of the captains of some of the Transatlantic steamers, that they have experienced heavy gales on the American coast, which have travelled with them all the way to Europe with unabated force. Great as has been the progress made in late years by meteorologists concerning the science of storms, very much yet remains to be done before we can call meteorology an exact science.

RIGHT ASCENSION.

The Right Ascension of any heavenly body is its angular distance measured along the Equator from the point of intersection of the Equator and Ecliptic. In the time of the ancient astronomers, this point was situated in the constellation of Aries, and called by them the "First Point of Aries," but it has since then retrograded considerably behind that constellation. Modern astronomers, however, still speak of this zero point, whence Right Ascensions are measured, as the "First Point of Aries." The Right Ascension and Declination are the two co-ordinates which define the position of any point on the celestial sphere with regard to the Equator as a fundamental plane, just as those of longitude and latitude define the position of any place on the terrestrial globe; the meridian of Greenwich being taken as the starting-point by geographers from which to reckon their longitudes, while the astronomer reckons his from the meridian of the first Point of Aries.

Since a well-regulated astronomical clock should show 0h. 0m. 0s. when the first Point of Aries is on the Meridian, the Right Ascension may be called the Sidereal time of Southing, and the approximate mean time corresponding to it may be easily found for any object whose Right Ascension is given in this Almanack by means of the column headed Sidereal Time at Mean Noon. The rule may be thus stated:—From the given Right Ascension subtract the Sidereal Time at the preceding Noon, and further diminish the result at the rate of 10 secs. an hour. If the Right Ascension should be smaller than the Sidereal time to be subtracted, then 24 hours must be added to it. As an example:—At what time will Regulus South on March 15?

R. A. of Regulus + 24*h.*	34*h.* 2*m.* 21*s.*
Sidereal Time at Mean Noon (sub.)	23*h.* 31*h.* 6*s.*
Diminish by the Acceleration for 10*h.* 31*m.* 15*s.* at 10*s.* per hour	10*h.* 31*m.* 15*s.*
	1*m.* 45*s.*
Approximate mean time of Southing, March 15	10*h.* 29*m.* 30*s.*

In a similar manner the Sidereal time corresponding to any mean time may be found. Suppose, for instance, that we wish to know approximately what the Sidereal time would be at 9·30 P.M. on November 5, we have merely to add Greenwich time to the time given in the column headed Sidereal Time at Mean Noon of that date:—

Sidereal time at mean noon	14*h.* 57*m.* 36*s.*
Greenwich time (add)	9*h.* 30*m.* —
	0*h.* 27*m.* 36*s.*
Add for acceleration for 9*h.* 30*m.* at 10*s.* per hour	1*m.* 35*s.*
Sidereal time November 5 at 9*h.* 30*m.* P.M.	0*h.* 29*m.* 11*s.*

To observers who are not furnished with a Sidereal Clock the Sidereal times at Mean Noon will be found very useful for easily finding the approximate mean times of Southing of the Stars, and also for ascertaining with equal readiness the Sidereal time corresponding to any required moment of mean time. If greater accuracy is desired, use the table on page 65.

ECLIPSES OF JUPITER'S SATELLITES.

The accompanying Table contains all the Eclipses of the first Satellite, and those only which are visible at Greenwich of the second, third, and fourth Satellites. The Roman numerals indicate the Satellite eclipsed; the letters D and R signifying respectively, Disappearance and Reappearance. Those Eclipses of the Satellites which are visible at Greenwich have an asterisk after the D or R in the second column.

From January until April 20 the Disappearances and Reappearances will take place on the Western side of the Planet, and from April 20 till October 18 on the Eastern side; and from December 1 to the end of the year on the Western side. But if an inverting telescope be used to observe them, these positions will be reversed in the field of view—the phenomena taking place on the Western side of the planet appearing on the left hand, and those on the Eastern side on the right hand.

The mean time of Eclipse for any other place than Greenwich may be easily found, by simply applying to the times given in the table the difference of longitude between Greenwich and the place for which the time is required, adding the difference if the longitude of the place is East of Greenwich, and subtracting if West.

EXPLANATION OF THE ASTRONOMICAL TABLES.

THE Mean Right Ascension and Declination for any other year, either before or after 1887, may be found from this table by multiplying the annual variation by the number of years from 1887, and applying it to the quantities above given; remarking, that if the required date be earlier than 1887, the signs of the annual variations must be changed. In applying the corrections, to reduce to any other date, to the Declinations, it must be borne in mind that N. Declination means +, and S. Declination —, and that the corrections must be added algebraically.

Configuration of Jupiter's Satellites.

This column exhibits, at the particular hour mentioned, the respective position of Jupiter and his Satellites, as seen in an inverting telescope. The white circles represent the Planet, and the numerals 1, 2, 3, and 4 the respective Satellites: a black circle is intended to show, either that the Satellite whose numeral it stands in the place of is in the shadow of the Planet (eclipsed), or else is behind the disc of Jupiter (occulted); the sign ☽ indicates that the Satellite in question is on the disc of the Planet.

Sidereal Time at Mean Noon.

This column indicates the Sidereal Time at Mean Noon on each day of the year, and is the time which the Observatory or Astronomical clock should show when the Mean Time clock points to Noon.

At the bottom of the pages containing the Tide Tables for each month, and immediately underneath the Right Ascension and Declination of the Pole-Star, &c., are given the places of a few of the more conspicuous Nebulæ and Star Clusters, derived chiefly from the Bedford Catalogue. Most of these may be seen pretty well with a telescope of from three to four inches aperture.

The other astronomical portions of the Almanack will require no more explanation than will be found at the head of the respective columns.

Under the head "Eclipses, Occultations, and other Celestial Phenomena," in each month, will be found the "Mean time of the Sun's semidiameter passing the meridian," for the 5th and 20th days. This will be useful in determining time by the Dipleidoscope or similar instrument, when, from the interference of clouds, &c., only one limb of the Sun is observed. From the values on the 5th and 20th, that for any other day can with sufficient accuracy be easily ascertained by interpolation.

It is supposed that α^2 Centauri, one of the brightest stars in the Southern hemisphere, is the nearest of the fixed stars to the Earth. The researches on its parallax by Henderson and Maclear gave for its distance from the Earth, in round numbers, twenty billions of miles. At the inconceivably rapid rate at which light is propagated through space, it would require three years and three months to reach the Earth from this star.

This Table of Mean Refractions is derived from that by the late Professor Bessel. With the argument 'apparent altitude' it gives the correction to be applied to observed altitudes in order to free them from the effect of atmospheric refraction. As refraction causes all bodies to appear more elevated above the horizon than they really are, the quantities in the table must be subtracted from the observed altitudes.

For an altitude not in the Table, the value of the mean refraction may easily be obtained by interpolation. For example, let the mean refraction be required for 6°35′: here opposite to 6° 30′ we have 7′50″, and opposite to the next argument, 7° 0′, 7′ 20″ for the mean refraction, and we see that for an increase of 30′ in the altitude, the refraction has decreased 30″; therefore a simple proportion shows us that we must decrease the value corresponding to 6°30′ by 5″, which will give 7′45″ as the mean refraction corresponding to 6° 35′ of apparent altitude.

TIDAL CURRENTS.

The tidal wave in the deep sea is merely an undulation; but, when shallow seas or bays are reached, the movement of the water is discernible. The general principle is, that in the deep sea there is a quick movement of the wave and a slow movement of the water; in the shallow sea there is a slow movement of the wave and a quick movement of the water, which is called the tidal current. These currents are frequently spoken of as the flood and ebb tides; but the terms (although sanctioned by usage) are not correct, because flood and ebb are applied to the rising and falling of the water, which is quite a different thing. The flood current in a channel supplies water for the wave, but the wave requires water after its summit has passed any particular point, so that at that point flood current continues although ebb tide may have commenced. Similarly the current may continue after flood tide has commenced. Tidal currents have also much to do with the formation of bars at the mouths of rivers. Therefore, unless the harbour engineer have a full knowledge of their set and force, and whether they act in conjunction with or in opposition to the ocean currents, his plans for improvement may be rendered nugatory.

The line (or rather lines) of native sovereigns is a very long one; some Irish historians have traced the succession to about the period of the Flood, "before which time there were many princes," but unfortunately, the records have not been preserved. According to Keating, the first sovereigns after the Milesian Conquest, of whom there is any "absolute certainty," were Heber and Heremon, Milesian princes from Gallicia, in Spain, who conquered Ireland, and gave to its throne a race of 171 kings. These two princes reigned jointly from the year 1300 B.C. till 1291, when Heremon alone ruled. Of their successors, who reigned from the year 1285 B.C. to the Christian era, about 169 in number, only fifteen died comfortably in their beds; four died of the plague or some malignant distemper, the rest being assassinated, killed in battle, or dying other violent deaths. Home Rule in all its beautiful simplicity was in existence from the earliest times till after the Conquest of Ireland by Henry II. in 1172; the Rulers, however, appear to have had anything but a peaceable quiet time. The following is an "authentic list" of—

The Stuarts derive their descent from Walter Fitz-Alan, lord of Oswestry, co. Salop, who entered the service of David I., King of Scotland, and became Hereditary High Steward. Walter, 6th High Steward, was a supporter of Robert Bruce (Robert I.), commanded a division at Bannockburn, and in 1315 gained the hand of Bruce's daughter Marjory. By Marjory he had a son who succeeded to the throne, in 1371, as Robert II., being the first King of the House of Stuart. We are then led by direct succession to James IV., who married in 1503 the Princess Margaret, eldest daughter of Henry VII. of England. His son and successor, James V., married, in 1538, as his second wife, Mary of Guise. His daughter, the famous Mary, Queen of Scots, married for the second time, in 1565, her cousin, Henry Stuart, Lord Darnley, grandson of the Princess Margaret, and the following year gave birth to a son, James VI., afterwards James I. of England. James derived his title to the English Throne from being the great-grandson of this Princess Margaret, and, on the failure of the male line, his hereditary right remained indisputable. Queen Elizabeth had named him as her successor, and Parliament, in compliance with her dying wish, had settled the succession on the heirs of Henry VII. Thus, in 1603, Scotland and England fell under the dominion of one Sovereign.

James I., after an inglorious reign of 22 years, died in 1625, and was succeeded by his son, Charles I., whose unhappy reign was closed by his execution in 1649. Cromwell and the Commonwealth followed, but the country tired of them, and the eldest son of Charles I. was restored in 1660.

Charles II., who died 6 Feb., 1685, left no issue by his queen, Katharine of Braganza. But that "most religious Sovereign" had had, by his various mistresses, no fewer than twelve children, among whom were Henry Fitzroy, Duke of Grafton (son of Barbara Villiers, or Palmer, Duchess of Cleveland), Charles Lennox, Duke of Richmond (son of Louise Renée de Perren-Court, of Querouaille, in France, created Duchess of Portsmouth), and Charles Beauclerk, Duke of St. Albans (son of Nell Gwynn). On each of these three sons were conferred enormous pensions, mostly derived from pleasant sinecure offices. The Duke of Grafton had—1. A perpetual grant of the prisage and butlerage dues on wines. These dues were in 1806 (by 46 Geo. III. c. 79) commuted into an annuity of £6,870, charged on the Consolidated Fund. 2. The Duke also came in for four separate and hereditary pensions of the net amount of £7,191 12s., granted by letters patent of Charles II., dated 22 Oct., 1673. They were redeemed in 1856 by payment of £193,777 13s. 2d. (at the rate of nearly twenty-seven years' purchase). 3. A pension of £4,700, granted originally to the Duke's mother, the Duchess of Cleveland. The annuity paid to the Duke of Grafton, in 1857, was £3,384, commuted into a net payment of £91,181 17s. 7d. 4. As compensation for another sinecure, the Comptrollership of the Seals in the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, the present Duke draws an annuity of £843, payable in "tail male." To the Duke of Richmond was granted, 18 Dec., 1676, a duty of 1s. per chaldron on coals exported from the Tyne and consumed in England, chargeable, however, with an annuity of £500 to Sir Thomas Clarges (a creature of Charles's) and his heirs in perpetuity. The main pension was commuted in 1799 (39 Geo. III. c. 84, and 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 43) into one of £19,000, charged on the Consolidated Fund. The Duke of St. Albans might, having regard to the princely grants accorded his brothers, consider himself badly used. In 1688 he obtained from James II. the dignity of Hereditary Grand Falconer, the fees bringing in the comparatively trifling sum of £965 a year. His Grace was also made Hereditary Registrar in the Court of Chancery by James II., and on the abolition of this useless office his representative agreed to draw the annual sum of £640.

Charles, who was himself, on his deathbed, reconciled to the Roman Church, was succeeded by his brother, James II., whose attacks on English liberties, and more especially on the English Church, only served to deepen the feeling of aversion with which the House of Stuart had come to be regarded by a Protestant nation. The birth, 10 June, 1688, of a "Prince of Wales"—afterwards the "Old Pretender"—hastened the collapse of James's rule, for a widespread belief arose that, in Burnet's words, a base imposture had been put upon the people. The expulsion of James having been effected with little difficulty, 11 Dec., 1688, the usual course of descent was necessarily set aside, and the Crown was offered by a National Convention sitting in form of Parliament, to William, Prince of Orange, and his wife Mary, eldest daughter of James by his first wife, Anne Hyde, daughter of the Earl of Clarendon, who accordingly ascended the throne as William III. and Mary II., 13 Feb., 1689. It was agreed that the administration of government should be placed in the hands of the King only (1 W. & M., sess. 2, c. 2). By the same statute it was further enacted, that in the event of Queen Mary dying without issue, the issue of her sister Anne, Princess of Denmark, were to be preferred to such issue as King William might have by any other wife. Mary died childless in 1694, and heirs failing to Anne, although she was seventeen times a mother, the hereditary right to the Crown would have reverted to the attainted son of James II., next to whom and his issue stood Anne Mary, Queen of Sardinia, the only surviving child and heiress of Henrietta Maria, Duchess of Orleans, youngest daughter of Charles I. To provide, therefore, against such contingency, and to secure the Protestant succession, the Act of Settlement (12 & 13 Will. III. c. 2) was passed, by which the Crown, after the death of Queen Anne, was settled upon the Princess Sophia, Electress and Duchess Dowager of Hanover, the youngest daughter of Elizabeth, daughter of James I. of England, and the heirs of her body, being Protestants. Sophia dying about seven weeks before Queen Anne, her eldest son, George Louis, Elector of Hanover, ascended the British throne, 20 Oct., 1714, as George I.

James II., died at St. Germain-en-Laye, 16 Sept., 1701. By his second wife, Mary of Modena, he left a son, James Francis Edward, and a daughter, Louisa Maria, who died unmarried in 1712. The son, James III., as he styled himself, the Chevalier de St. George, or the "Old Pretender," as others styled him—married Clementina, granddaughter of John Sobieski, King of Poland, by whom he left at his decease, 1 Jan., 1766, two sons. Charles Edward, the elder, known as the "Young Pre-tender" and "Young Chevalier," whose hopes of becoming King of England were shattered by his defeat at Culloden in 1746, died without legitimate issue, 31 Jan., 1788. His brother, Henry Benedict, a respectable ecclesiastic, was raised to the purple in 1747, and subsequently bore the designation of Cardinal York. His death at Rome, in June, 1807, extinguished the descendants of James II. The "Legitimate" succession then opened to the descendants of his sister, the Princess Henrietta Maria, wife of Philip, Duke of Orleans. She died in 1670, leaving two daughters: Mary, the eldest daughter, married Charles II., King of Spain, but died without issue; her sister, Anne, married Victor Amadeus, King of Sardinia, from whom was descended Francis V., Duke of Modena, who married, 30 March, 1842, Adelgonde, daughter of Louis I., King of Bavaria, and died without issue, 20 Nov., 1875. His younger brother, Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria, had married, 4 Oct., 1847, Elizabeth, daughter of the Archduke Joseph of Austria, and left at his death, 15 Dec., 1849, an only daughter, Mary Theresa, who, born 2 July, 1849, and married 20 Feb., 1868, to Louis, Prince of Bavaria, eldest son of Luitpold, Prince Regent of Bavaria, is now the unquestionable heiress of the House of Stuart.

THE HOUSE OF HANOVER, which since 1714 has occupied the English throne, is lineally descended from the famous Guelfs, or Welfs, of Bavaria. In 1235 their territory, comprising the districts of Brunswick and Lüneburg, was erected into a duchy. The whole of the Duchy of Brunswick fell, in 1527, into the hands of Duke Ernest, a zealous adherent of Luther. His two sons effected a partition of the duchy, which has continued until the present day. The elder son of Ernest became the Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel. William, the younger son of Ernest, became Duke of Brunswick-Lüneburg, and is the ancestor of the House of Hanover. His grandson, Ernest Augustus, became Duke of Calenberg or Hanover in 1679, and Elector of Hanover. Ernest Augustus' eldest son, George Louis, succeeded him in the electorate, 23 Jan., 1698, and in 1714 became, in right of his mother, the first British monarch of the House of Guelph.

The advent of a new and foreign dynasty, although necessary to maintain the Protestant succession, was regarded by the people with little favour. Nor was this feeling confined to one class alone. Horace Walpole sneered at the whole Royal House as, "Messieurs les Allemands;" and even the courtly Chesterfield, with Gay's assistance, parodied one of Laureate Cibber's New Year's Odes, turning the nauseous praise into ridicule, much to the delight of all classes.

GEORGE I. came amongst us with little knowledge of English politics and little interest in English legislation. He was so ignorant even of the language of his new subjects, that his English minister, who understood neither French nor German, was forced to communicate with him in a jargon of dog Latin. For literature and art he had the utmost contempt. But he was an excellent man of business, and while accepting our loyalty for what it was worth, filled his own pockets, the pockets of his German attendants and of his German mistresses, got away from England as often as possible, and used the strength of this country for the advantage of his beloved Hanover.

On his death at Osnabrück, 11 June, 1727, his son and successor, GEORGE II., was forty-five years of age. As Prince of Wales he had been remarkable for little, save for his quarrels with his father, which form one of the scandals of history; a scandal, by the way, repeated in the next two reigns. He inherited the paternal disgust for all "boets and bainters," and the paternal fondness for money and fat mistresses. "Not one magnanimous or humane action," says Macaulay, "is recorded of him." The hatred which George I. and his son felt for each other was as a trifle compared with the hatred which George II. and his Queen, Caroline of Anspach, bore towards their eldest born, Frederick Louis, Prince of Wales. His mother described him to Lord Hervey as being "the greatest ass, and the greatest liar, and the greatest canaille, and the greatest beast in the whole world," and both she and her daughter were unanimous in wishing for his death. This event, accelerated by drink and debauchery, was not long in coming, and Frederick thus furnished, as Horace Walpole wittily remarks, the only point he had in common with his pretended model, the Black Prince, in dying before his father. His death, which occurred 31 March, 1751, at the age of forty-four, drew forth the bitter Jacobite epitaph:—

"Here lies Fred,
Who was alive and is dead;
Had it been his father,
I had much rather;
Had it been his brother,
Still better than another;
Had it been his sister,
No one would have missed her;
Had it been the whole generation,
Still better for the nation;
But since 'tis only Fred,
Who was alive and is dead,
There's no more to be said."

Something more, however, could be said of Fred than that he was dead. By his wife, Augusta, youngest daughter of Frederick II., Duke of Saxe-Gotha, he had left a son, then thirteen years old, who nine years later, in 1760, succeeded his grandfather, as GEORGE III.

Until 1837 the Electorate of Hanover and the English monarchy were united. In 1815 Hanover was made into a kingdom, with extended territory. But on the accession of Queen Victoria, in 1837, the crown of Hanover passed to her uncle, Ernest Augustus, Duke of Cumberland, as males only were entitled to it. After the war of 1866 Hanover was absorbed into the Prussian state.

The Royal Family are allied to the following houses:—1. BRUNSWICK (Wolfenbüttel), by the marriage, in 1764, of Augusta, eldest daughter of Frederick, Prince of Wales, to Charles William Ferdinand, Hereditary Prince. 2. MECKLENBURG-STRELITZ, by the marriage, in 1761, of George III. to Charlotte, second daughter of Charles Louis Frederick, the reigning Duke. 3. SAXE-GOTHA, which embraces i. Saxe-Meiningen, allied by the marriage, in 1818, of William, Duke of Clarence, to Adelaide, eldest daughter of the reigning Duke; ii. Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, allied by the marriage, in 1818, of Edward, Duke of Kent, to Victoria, daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld. The Duchess of Kent was sister of Prince Leopold, late King of the Belgians, who married, in 1816, Princess Charlotte of Wales, only daughter of George IV.

George William Frederick, eldest son of Frederick Lewis, Prince of Wales (eldest son of George II., born 20th January, 1707; died 20th March, 1751), by Augusta, youngest daughter of Frederick, Duke of Saxe-Gotha (born 30th Nov., 1719; died 8th Feb., 1772), was born at Norfolk House, St. James's Square, 4th June, 1738. He succeeded to the throne as George III. on the death of his grandfather, 25th Oct., 1760. On 8th Sept., 1761, he married Sophia Charlotte, daughter of Charles, Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz (born 19th May, 1744; died 17th Nov., 1818), and was crowned with her on 22nd September following: he had by her a family of nine sons and six daughters. Early in his reign he showed symptoms of insanity, and after recovering from two serious attacks (1788, 1804) his mind entirely gave way; many of his latter years were consequently passed in seclusion, and the government was carried on, from 5th Feb., 1811, until his death, by his eldest son George, under the title of "Prince Regent." George III. died at Windsor, 29th Jan., 1820. His family were as follows:—

I. George Augustus Frederick, Prince of Wales, born 12th August, 1762. On 8th April, 1795, he married his cousin Caroline, daughter of Charles, Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel (born 17th May, 1768; died 7th Aug., 1821), by whom he had a daughter, the Princess Charlotte of Wales (born 7th Jan., 1796; died in childbirth, 6th Nov., 1817, having married, 2nd May, 1816, Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, afterwards King of the Belgians). The prince succeeded to the throne as George IV., 29th Jan., 1820. He died at Windsor, 26th June, 1830.

II. Frederick, born 16th Aug., 1763, was at the age of six months declared Prince-Bishop of Osnaburgh. On 27th Nov., 1784, he was created Duke of York and Albany, and Earl of Ulster. On 29th Sept., 1791, he married Frederica, daughter of Frederick William II. of Prussia (born 7th May, 1767; died, without issue, 9th Aug., 1820). The Duke, who was for many years Commander-in-Chief of the Army, died 5th Jan., 1827.

III. William Henry, born 21st Aug., 1765, was, on 20th May, 1789, created Duke of Clarence and St. Andrews, and Earl of Munster. He for many years lived with Mrs. Jordan, an actress, and had by her a numerous family, who took the name of FitzClarence. On 11th July, 1818, he married Adelaide, daughter of George, Duke of Saxe-Meiningen (born 13th Aug., 1792; died 2nd Dec., 1849), by whom he had two daughters—Charlotte Augusta Louisa (born and died 27th March, 1819), and Elizabeth Georgina Adelaide (born 20th December, 1820; died 4th March, 1821). The Duke, who had entered the Royal Navy in 1779, held the office of Lord High Admiral in 1827–28, and succeeded to the throne as William IV., 26th June, 1830. He died at Windsor, 20th June, 1837.

IV. Charlotte Augusta, Princess Royal, born 29th September, 1766; married, 18th May, 1797, Frederick, Prince (afterwards King) of Wurtemberg (born 6th Nov., 1754; died 30th Oct., 1816). She died, without issue, 6th Oct., 1828.

V. Edward Augustus, born 2nd Nov., 1767, was on 23rd April, 1799, created Duke of Kent and Strathearn, and Earl of Dublin. He married at Coburg, 29th May, 1818 (and again at Kew Palace, 11th July), Victoria, daughter of Francis, Duke of Saxe-Coburg, sister of Prince Leopold, and widow of Charles, Prince of Leiningen (born 17th Aug., 1786; died 16th March, 1861), by whom he had an only child, Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The duke died 23rd Jan., 1820.

VI. Augusta Sophia, born 8th Nov., 1768. She died unmarried, 22nd Sept., 1840.

VII. Elizabeth, born 22nd May, 1770. She married, 7th April, 1818, Frederick, Landgrave of Hesse-Homburg (born 30th July, 1769; died 2nd April, 1829); died, without issue, 10th Jan., 1840.

VIII. Ernest Augustus, born 5th June, 1771, was, on 24th April, 1799, created Duke of Cumberland and Earl of Armagh. He married, 29th May, 1815, Frederica, third daughter of Frederick V., Grand-Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, widow, 1st, of Prince Frederick Louis Charles of Prussia, and 2nd, of Frederick William, Prince of Salms-Braunfels (born 2nd March, 1778; died 21st June, 1841), by whom he had issue George, ex-King of Hanover, born 27th May, 1819; mar. 18th Feb., 1843, Alexandrina Mary, eldest daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Altenberg, by whom he had issue one son and two daughters; he died 12th June, 1878. The duke became King of Hanover on the decease of his brother William IV., and died 18th Nov., 1851.

IX. Augustus Frederick, born 27th Jan., 1773, created Duke of Sussex 27th Nov., 1801. He married at Rome, 4th April, 1793, and at St. George's, Hanover Square, 5th Dec. following, Lady Augusta Murray, daughter of John, Earl of Dunmore; but this being contrary to the provisions of the Royal Marriage Act (12 Geo. III. c. 11), the union was pronounced invalid in Aug., 1794. By Lady Augusta—who afterwards took by royal licence the name of D'Ameland—he had a son and a daughter: Augustus Frederick, known afterwards as Sir Augustus Frederick D'Este (born 13th Jan., 1794; died, unmarried, 20th Dec., 1848), and Augusta (born 11th Aug., 1801; married 13th Aug., 1845, Lord Truro; died 21st May, 1866). Lady Augusta D'Ameland died 5th March, 1830, and the duke shortly after contracted a morganatic marriage with Lady Cecilia Underwood, created Duchess of Inverness, who died 1st August, 1873. He died 21st April, 1843, and was buried in Kensal Green Cemetery.

X. Adolphus Frederick, born 24th Feb., 1774, was, on 27th Nov., 1801, created Duke of Cambridge, Earl of Tipperary, and Baron Culloden. He married at Hesse-Cassel, 1st May, 1818 (and again at the Queen's Palace, 1st June), Augusta, daughter of Frederick, Landgrave of Hesse (born 25th July, 1797), by whom he had issue, George, Duke of Cambridge; Augusta, Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz; and Mary, Duchess of Teck. The Duke, who acted as Viceroy of Hanover until the death of William IV., died at Kew, 8th July, 1850.

XI. Mary, born 25th April, 1776. She married, 22nd July, 1816, her cousin William Frederick, Duke of Gloucester (born 15th May, 1776; died 30th Nov., 1834), and died without issue, 30th April, 1857.

XII. Sophia, born 3rd Nov., 1777; died unmarried, 27th May, 1848.

XIII. Octavius, born 23rd Feb., 1779; died 3rd May, 1783.

XIV. Alfred, born 22nd Sept., 1780; died 26th August, 1782.

XV. Amelia, born 7th August, 1783; died unmarried, 2nd Nov., 1810.

Younger Sons of the younger Sons of Peers.
Baronets' younger Sons.
Younger Sons of Knights in the same order as eldest Sons.
Gentlemen entitled to bear arms.

Women take the same rank as their husbands or as their brothers; but the daughter of a peer marrying a Commoner retains her Title as Lady or Honourable. Daughters of Peers rank next immediately after the wives their elder brothers, and before their younger brothers' wives. Daughters of Peers marrying Peers of lower degree take the same order of precedency as that of their husbands; thus the daughter of a Duke marrying a Baron degrades to the rank of Baroness only, while her sisters married to commoners retain their rank and take precedence of the Baroness. Merely official rank on the husband's part does not give any similar precedence to the wife.

There are two Orders confined to Ladies: the Order of Victoria and Albert, and the Order of the Crown of India. But members are entitled to no special precedence.

LOCAL PRECEDENCY.—No written code of county or city order of precedence has been promulgated, but naturally in the county the Lord-Lieutenant stands first, and secondly the Sheriffs. In London and other Corporations, the Mayor stands first, after him the Sheriffs, Aldermen, Chief Officers, and Livery. At Oxford and Cambridge the High Sheriff takes precedence of the Vice-Chancellor.

 Knights Bachelors who have received the higher honour of the Bath, Star of India, &c., are not included in this list.

Consists of the whole Peerage of Great Britain and of certain representatives of the Peerages of Scotland and Ireland, but many members of these latter have also English titles, which give them seats in the House. For instance, the Duke of Buccleuch sits as Earl of Doncaster, and the Duke of Leinster as Viscount Leinster. It is under these inferior titles that they will be found in this list, but for convenience of reference such Peers are separately enumerated. Exclusive of 11 minors, and one baron whose claim is not yet established, the assembly consists of 5 Princes of the Blood, 2 Archbishops, 21 Dukes, 19 Marquises, 112 Earls, 29 Viscounts, 24 Bishops, 281 Barons, 16 Scottish Representative Peers elected for each Parliament, and 28 Irish Representative Peers elected for life (2 of these are also included in the Peers of England)—in all, 535. There are also 7 Ladies who are Peeresses in their own right, whose titles and names are given at page 122.

b. signifies born; s., succeeded; m., married; w., widower or widow; div., divorced; M., Minor.

 Irish Peers have an advantage over those of Scotland inasmuch as they are eligible for seats in the House of Commons, Baron Muncaster to wit, while members of the Scottish Peerage are not admitted.

Dates of Dignities.

THE Saxons in the fifth and sixth centuries founded the Heptarchy, meaning the seven States, though there were really nine: these were all subdued by Egbert, King of Wessex, who was descended from Cerdic. He, in 827, took the title of King of England. The Norman kings, beginning with William I., in 1066, were also Dukes of Normandy. Henry II., in 1172, styled himself Lord of Ireland, which title Henry VIII., in 1541, changed into King. Edward III., in 1337, assumed the title of King of France. Anne, on the Union of England with Scotland, became Queen of Great Britain; and George III., on the Union with Ireland, dropped the empty style of King of France, and took the title of King of Great Britain and Ireland. Her present Majesty, in 1859, altered her official designation to Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Colonies and Dependencies thereof, Empress of India, Defender of the Faith, Sovereign of the Order of the Garter, &c., which title, after much discussion in Parliament, was affirmed, and came into general use 1st January, 1877. The first English DUKE was Edward the Black Prince: he was created Duke of Cornwall by his father, Edward III., in 1337. The title of MARQUIS was first bestowed by Richard II. on his favourite, Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, created Marquis of Dublin in 1386. The Saxon titles of ALDERMAN, or EORL, and THANE, were changed into EARL and BARON by William I. The title of VISCOUNT was long in use in France before it was bestowed on any person in England: the first person who held it was John Beaumont, created Viscount Beaumont and Count of Boulogne, in France, in 1440. The order of BARONETS was established by James I. in 1611, and exists only in the British Dominions.

SHOWING THE DATES OF EXISTING DIGNITIES, AND THE ORDER IN WHICH THEY WERE CONFERRED.
* Irish Peerages. † Scotch Peerages. x Merged in other titles.

THE Peerage of the United Kingdom consists of:—1. Those Peers of England whose titles date from before the Legislative Union with Scotland (1st May, 1707), and who therefore take precedence of all others: all these are Peers of Parliament. 2. Peers of Scotland created previous to the Union: of these, sixteen are elected to sit in the House of Lords. 3. Peers of Great Britain created previous to the Legislative Union with Ireland (1st January, 1801): these all sit in the House of Lords. 4. Peers of Ireland created previous to the Union: of these, twenty-eight are elected to sit in the House of Lords. 5. Peers of the United Kingdom created since the Legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland. 6. Peers of Ireland of recent creation. By the Articles of Union the Sovereign is empowered to create one Irish Peer whenever four of the old Peerages become extinct. The most recent creation is that of the late Duke of Abercorn (1868), who sat in the House of Lords by virtue of his British Marquisate. 7. Life Peers. Of these there are three Lords Blackburn, Watson, and FitzGerald: they sit in Parliament, but the titles are not hereditary.

The Representative Scottish Peers are elected for every fresh Parliament, but those for Ireland are elected for life. Many of the others for both countries having had English or later titles granted to them, sit in the House of Lords by virtue of such titles: thus the senior Scottish Marquis, Huntly (1599), sits as Baron Meldrum (1815), and the senior Irish Duke, Leinster (1766), sits as Viscount Leinster (1747).

All Irish Peers not Peers of Parliament are eligible for seats in the House of Commons, and may represent any Borough, County, or University in England or Scotland, but not in Ireland. Peers of Scotland cannot be elected as Members of Parliament in any of the three countries.

Yorke—Hardwicke

THE ELEVENTH PARLIAMENT OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

THE First Reform Bill, England and Wales, received the Royal Assent 7th June, 1832; that for Scotland, 17th July; for Ireland, 7th August: Parliament was dissolved 3rd December, 1832. The New Reformed Parliament was elected the same month, and first assembled January 29, 1833. No alteration was made in the total number of members, but they were differently distributed: Cornwall, which for many years had returned 40 members, was allowed 14; it now returns 7; and Durham, which had formerly sent but 4, was permitted to return 10; it now returns 16. Great care was taken not to disturb family (especially Whig family) interests: Tavistock, with a constituency of 336, Chippenham with 314, Cirencester 467, Devizes 358, Knaresborough 230, Totnes 362, and Honiton with a constituency of 287, being each authorized to send two members, the same number as was allotted to the new Boroughs of Birmingham with 7,317, Lambeth 16,284, Finsbury 17,735, Marylebone 18,079, and the Tower Hamlets with a constituency of no fewer than 21,131. Naturally these discrepancies were constant sources of dissatisfaction, and many attempts were made to "reform" the Reform Bill of 1832. These efforts were eventually successful, and in 1867-68, Mr. Disraeli succeeded in passing a new Reform Bill, which, while it remedied many of the most glaring abuses, still left much to be desired.

The Bill of 1885, giving a vote to almost everybody that cared to possess it, and entirely altering and remodelling the places represented, was passed without the usual amount of open discussion in the House of Commons, the leaders on both sides having met and arranged all the details. Had more care been taken there would have been less confusion in the designation of places represented. As it is there are, nominally, two members for Shoreditch, but practically there is not one, the two members being the Hon. Member for Hoxton and the Hon. Member for Haggerston. One of the representatives for Liverpool is the Hon. Member for Scotland! So difficult has it been found to arrange the places represented to correspond with the names of representatives, that, avoiding all attempts to put places in order, they have been arranged alphabetically in the following list. The Members for Liverpool will therefore have to be sought for under the names of Abercromby, Everton, Scotland, &c.

The House of Commons elected at the end of 1885 had but a short existence. It met for the first time on the 12th January, was prorogued on the 25th June, and immediately afterwards dissolved. A new Parliament was elected in July, and met on the 5th August, Mr. Gladstone having in the mean time resigned, and the Marquis of Salisbury having been appointed Prime Minister.

The present House consists of 670 members—465 for England, 30 for Wales, 72 for Scotland, and 103 for Ireland. The figures placed after the names of places give the number of the constituency; the numbers polled are those after the names of candidates; the names of the successful candidates, now members, are printed in italics.

In consequence of the disruption of the Liberal party it is necessary to adopt a fresh classification; the letters after the names are—C. Conservative, L. Liberal, G.L. Gladstone-Liberal, and N. Nationalist. The numbers are given as—Conservatives, 313, Gladstone-Liberals, 189, Nationalists, 84, and Liberals, 81; there are also 3 vacancies, 1 occasioned by death, and 2 owing to double returns in Ireland.

Administrations in the Present Century.

Date.	Prime Minister.	Duration. Years	Duration. Days.	Chancellor.	Exchequer.	Home Secretary.	Foreign Secretary.	Colonial Secretary.	Irish Secretary.	Bd. of Control, India
Dec. 23, 1783	William Pitt	17	84	Thurlow Loughborough	William Pitt	Portland	Grenville	The Colonial Office in its present form was not constituted till 1854. Up to 1801 the business of the Colonies was carried on at the Home Office, but in that year it was transferred to the Secretary for War, and so continued till 1854, when the offices were divided, and Sir George Grey became first Secretary of State for the Colonies. QUARTER SESSIONS IN COUNTIES.

These are to be held in the first whole weeks respectively after March 31, June 24, Octr. 11, and Dec. 28; the magistrates determining the day of the week on which the sessions shall commence at each place. But the Easter sessions may be altered to any time between March 7 and April 23, so as to prevent interference with the Spring assizes. Any of the above days falling on Sunday, the sessions will be held on the Monday week following.

Fifty or sixty years ago, the taxation of this country was exceedingly oppressive; it came home to every one: the poor washerwoman found the tax-gatherer's hand in her soapsuds; the shoemaker on his leather; he worked with a taxed tallow dip, or by daylight which passed through taxed glass, all windows that could be dispensed with being blocked up; the excise-man was ubiquitous. Everything coming into this country had to pay a heavy customs duty. Even now there are some remains of this old state of taxation. A free and enlightened citizen who, in 1887, may wish to plaster his head with flour, must pay for the privilege; if he engage a man-servant, he must procure a licence; if he put him into a coat with a cat, lion, or tiger impressed upon the buttons, he must obtain another licence. It can therefore be easily imagined how oppressive taxation must have been when it clutched at every conceivable thing. Then, no one thought it any sin to cheat the revenue; on the contrary, to do so was considered meritorious rather than blameworthy: no guest, whatever his station in life, objected to drink brandy which his host assured the company had never paid duty to King George or to King William; in point of fact the liquor was thought better than any which the merchant could supply. No lady who went abroad returned empty-handed: gloves, French cambric, lace, and certain other things were in some mysterious manner secreted, and on the first opportunity shown to friends. Nor were the fair sex alone in this pursuit. The practice has not yet died out; few readers can honestly say that they have returned from their holiday trip without learning exactly how many cigars their cases will hold, or how much eau-de-Cologne may be passed. But, and this is very important, smuggling as an "honourable and praiseworthy," trade is dead; a professional smuggler or cheater of the revenue would very properly be denounced as a rogue.

Mr. Huskisson was the first minister who expressed enlightened views on the subject of taxation, and Sir Robert Peel the first to put them in practice. With one stroke of the pen he cleared the tariff of several hundred items, and gave the death-blow to smuggling. In this he was followed by his pupil and lieutenant, Mr. Gladstone. Other Chancellors there have been, but they have mostly been conspicuous by their failures: it is not our business to mention names except in commendation; they will readily recur to the reader's mind; even now the country, or rather the unfairly taxed classes, are suffering from the blunder of one, who, not strong enough to carry his unpopular budget, contented himself by adding to the already heavy income-tax, letting off free the great mass of people who could and should contribute their quota of taxation. There is a grand opening for the present or for some future Chancellor of the Exchequer, strong enough to grapple with the present sources of revenue, to rectify its inconsistencies, and yet produce a larger result. It can be done.

The gross amount of revenue collected in the year ending 31st March, 1886, was £92,135,296, but only £89,683,783 reached the national till, £2,451,512 being stopped on its way for repayments, allowances, discounts, bounties, etc. This compares favourably with the income of the year preceding, which was £88,063,055, or £1,620,728 less; the following are the items:—

Public Net Revenue the last Two Years.

	1884–85.	1885–86.
Customs	£20,557,819	£19,722,302
Excise	26,501,612	25,441,922
Income-Tax	11,922,770	15,247,312
Stamps	11,886,185	11,600,614
House-Tax		1,867,377
Land-Tax	2,900,150	1,023,196
Post-Office	7,898,911	8,162,651
Telegraphs	1,739,586	1,745,056
Crown Lands	483,306	477,820
Interest on Advances & Suez Canal Shares	1,027,350	1,376,080
Miscellaneous	3,145,366	3,019,453
Totals	£88,063,055	£89,683,783

Under the head of Property and Income Tax the amounts stated give the approximate net produce under each schedule for 1885-86 compared with the preceding year:—

	1884–85.	1885–86.
A (Lands, Tenements, &c.)	£4,023,512	£5,101,442
B (Occupation of Land, &c.)	312,639	399,137
C (Annuities, Dividends, &c.)	919,755	1,322,274
D (Trades, Professions, &c.)	5,966,997	7,502,109
E (Public Offices, &c.)	699,867	922,350
Totals	£11,922,770	£15,247,312

The Income, or Property tax, in some form is a very old imposition; it was revived by Mr. Pitt in 1799 as a temporary war-tax, but it was not repealed till 1816. It was gradually raised to ten per cent., and in the year 1815 produced more than fifteen millions. The Whigs were bad financiers, and, under Lord Melbourne, were at their worst. "Retrenchment" was one of their party cries, and to curry popularity they cut down tax after tax, and were in such low water that the Chancellor of the Exchequer was at his wits' ends, and being unable to devise anything better, adopted the expedient of adding an additional five per cent. all round to the existing taxation. To his astonishment he discovered that in political economy two and two do not always make four; the additional five per cent. was a failure. With scarce a regret the Ministry made way for Sir Robert Peel, and he, with Mr. Goulburn, soon put matters straight, the Income or Property tax being chiefly instrumental in this. The imposition of the tax in 1842 met with great opposition; but it has been found so useful by every succeeding ministry, that now it may probably be regarded as permanent. In principle it is fair and just, but unfortunately it cannot be assessed with the same exactness as some other taxes. In 1855 it was raised to 1s. 4d. in the pound.

The Customs tariff is now simplicity itself: the items are few, but they are very productive. Tobacco stands at the head; spirits and wine come next, producing £5,348,525; tea follows. The different items are:—

Beer, &c.	£8,911	Raisins	£146,630
Chicory	65,651	Rum	2,029,391
Cocoa	70,472	Brandy	1,356,673
Coffee	203,355	Geneva	124,342
Currants	307,579	Other Sorts	643,465
Figs	29,047	Tea	4,187,254
Plate	6,827	Tobacco, &c.	9,298,989
Plums	6,737	Wine	1,194,654
Prunes	7,796	All other	2,247

The greatest source of National Income arises from Excise. Two of the items press heavily upon beer and spirit drinkers, but as their contribution of duty is entirely voluntary, this must be consolatory to abstainers, who have the satisfaction of knowing that teetotalers pay but thirty-eight per cent. of their country's expenditure, their more thirsty rivals paying nearly sixty-two per cent.

Beer	£8,403,580	Plate Dealers	£48,263
Spirits	13,140,694	Gun	85,942
Railways	337,499	Hawkers	26,595
Chicory	2,536	Med. Vendrs.	5,064
Coffee Labels	3,989	Pawnbrokers	35,385
LICENSES:		Refreshmt. House	6,835
Auctioneers	80,169	Distillers & Rectifiers	4,166
Beer and Cider	186,547	Spirit dealers	119,669
Brewers	36,140	Publicans & Grocers	1,474,381
Dog	343,133	Tobacco	85,301
Armorial	76,234	Wines	67,934
Carriages	540,508	Other	9,096
Male Srvnts.	137,294
Game	184,958

The fourth section of Income, Stamps, &c., is more open to objection, especially the death duties, which alone produced the large amount of nearly seven and a half millions last year. Lord John Russell had no sympathy with the man who having had a legacy of £50,000, grumbled at the tax, £5,000 being deducted; many who have received smaller sums have not been in such a happy state of mind. The new "Corporation" Duty has not been so productive as was hoped by its proposer. The small sum of £133 15*s.* 0*d.* was received for "Bankers' Notes," and of this £36 17*s.* 6*d.* was deducted, so that only £96 17*s.* 6*d.* reached the Exchequer; apparently it would be better to abolish the duty. The simple Penny Receipt Stamp produced nearly a million; that on silver and plate £51,763, and of this the makers deducted £6,760 for drawbacks, so that the net amount was only £45,000. With silver at 4*s.* 2*d.* an oz. the duty of 1*s.* 6*d.* is absurd. If taken off, and a merely nominal duty, little more than the cost of testing the quality or fineness and stamping the article, say 2*d.* or 3*d.* an ounce, and no drawback whatever allowed, the demand for silver goods would be enormous; no couple, however poor, would think of marrying till they had procured their half-dozen standard silver spoons; these are like so much money, and the accommodating "Uncle" will always lend something on the spoons when deposited with him. The gross sum received represents a payment upon about 690,000 ounces; in 1840 the duty was paid upon 1,270,000 ounces. The items under this head are:—

Probate death duties	£4,106,644	Bankers' Notes	£ 96
Legacy	2,474,722	Composition	124,010
Succession	858,240	Cards	15,852
		Gold Plate	22,310
		Silver Plate	45,002
Corporation	32,647	Licences, &c.	153,164
Deeds	1,800,000	Medicines	178,718
Bills of Exchange	653,354	INSURANCES:
Receipts & 1*d.* Stmps.	963,260	Life	38,527
		Marine	136,380

Land Tax and House Tax between them produce about £2,900,000. The Land Tax can hardly be remitted: it would be unfair to those who have already redeemed it; but the House Tax is capable of some improvement. Like several other taxes, it may be that a reduction of the tax, allowing no exceptions or variations whatever, and assessing the amount upon the real value of the house, would be fairer than as it is levied at present. Of course any alteration of this kind, making no allowance to any class, would be productive of much grumbling; but it must be assumed that, if so assessed, the tax would be considerably reduced.

The receipts under the head of Post Office are very satisfactory; under that of Telegraph less so. Tradesmen on balancing their books, and before dividing profits, are in the habit of charging five per cent. "Interest on capital." Were the postal authorities to do this with telegraphs, it is to be feared that the returns would figure for something less than £1,745,000. The Parcel Post must at present be considered in its infancy.

Woods, Forests, and Land Revenue produce £380,000. There is one satisfactory item, a payment of £32,561 on account of the Sardinian Loan; and the interest on purchase-money of Suez Canal shares received from the Egyptian Government amounted to £377,776. The other sources of revenue are too many to enumerate; one, however, may be mentioned, viz., that received from persons who remitted it to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for "conscience' sake," £6,565 17*s.* 8*d.*

Of the National Expenditure nothing need here be said beyond presenting the various chief items, which are:—

EXPENDITURE.

DEBT:
Interest of the Funded Debt	£18,793,179
Terminable Annuities	3,502,134

The National Debt.

On the first of January, 1816, the National Debt amounted to £885,186,323, and the Annual Charge was £32,457,141. On the 5th of April, 1885, the Debt was reduced to £742,282,411, and the Charge to £21,858,615. In 1816, the population of the United Kingdom numbered 19,520,488, and in 1885, 36,331,119. In 1816 the amount of Debt per head was £45 6*s.*, and in 1885 but £20 5*s.*

The total amount was actually larger than the sum given above; but by adopting the present method of capitalizing the Annuities then outstanding as three per cent. stock, the following figures will represent the state of the Debt on the 5th of January, 1815. Reckoned in this manner it stood as follows:—

Funded Debt	£816,312,000
Unfunded Debt	44,727,000
Terminable Annuities capitalized	39,397,000
	£900,436,000

This large amount of Debt was the growth of many years, and nearly all had been raised for foreign wars. There was a trifling amount (£664,263) due when the "glorious revolution" of 1688 brought over the Dutch King William to save the country from Popery and other evils, but in carrying out this project he succeeded in adding to the Debt nearly sixteen millions during the twelve years of his reign. Under Queen Anne, Marlborough added to the glories of the country, and helped to swell the Debt, which at the time of the Queen's death had increased by nearly thirty-eight millions. Under the first George the Debt decreased slightly, but George the Second came to its rescue, and left the country nearly eighty-seven millions worse off than he found it. During the first twelve years of George III. the Debt was again reduced by about ten millions, and at the time of the revolt of the American Colonies it was under one hundred and thirty millions, an amount which frightened all the political economists of that day. Undismayed at this, the obstinate king and his weak ministers pressed on the war, "entirely regardless of expense." The bill was a heavy one, and added one hundred and twenty-one millions more to the permanent Debt. On the conclusion of the disastrous war, which had all along been unpopular, there was a considerable outcry at the waste, and some efforts were made to reduce the amount, and in the nine years from 1784 to 1793, ten and a half millions were paid off; no less than £2,421,681 being paid off in 1792.

The French revolutionary war began in 1793, and with a short interval of exhaustion, called "Peace," lasted till 1815, when Bonaparte was sent to St. Helena, and the forty years' real peace commenced. During these twenty-three years of war, money was borrowed in the most extravagant manner. From 1793 to 1801 the average cost of £100 three per cent. Stock was £57 17*s.* 6*d.*, and from 1803 to the conclusion of the War, £60 17*s.* 6*d.* Had the government adopted an opposite plan, and for every hundred pounds borrowed received the whole amount, paying five or six or even seven per cent., the gross indebtedness of the country on the termination of the War would have been several hundred millions less, and the high rate of interest could have been gradually reduced. Such, however, was the imbecility of ministers, that in 1798 they raised a loan of £3,000,000, at the rate of £200 three per cent. Stock and 5*s.* long annuity for every hundred pounds borrowed. Another instance may be mentioned. In 1815, a loan of £36,000,000 was negotiated, every subscriber receiving £174 three per cent. Stock, and £10 four per cent. With loans negotiated on such terms it is easy to understand how rapidly the Debt accumulated. The following loans were raised from 1793 to 1816:

Year.	£	Year.	£	Year.	£
1793	4,877,956	1801	27,305,271	1809	12,298,375
1794	6,998,389	1802	14,638,254	1810	7,792,444
1795	30,464,831	1803	8,752,761	1811	19,143,953

1800	23,030,529	1808	12,095,044	1816	514,059

With the return of peace efforts were made to reduce the Debt; but this was no easy matter. In 1813, the National expenditure had reached the unprecedented amount of £108,397,645, of which £68,748,363 was raised by taxation, and £39,640,282 by loans. In 1815, the Waterloo year, the amount raised by taxation had increased to £72,210,512; but in 1817, the War being finished, taxation was reduced to £52,055,913, and out of this the sum of £1,826,814 was applied to the reduction of Debt. The following amounts were paid off from 1817 to 1838, when for a time the payments ceased:—

Year.	£	Year.	£	Year.	£
1817	1,826,814	1824	7,456,559	1832	5,696
1818	1,624,606	1825	9,900,725	1833	1,023,784

Large amounts have since been paid off, and on the 5th of April, 1886, the total outstanding was estimated at £711,788,232.

The Debt is of three descriptions:—I. Funded; II. Terminable Annuities; III. Unfunded:—

I.—THE FUNDED, OR PERMANENT, DEBT.

That is, Debt which the government is not under obligation to pay off at any fixed time. It is represented at present by Consols, reduced three per cents., new three per cents., two and a half and two and three quarters per cents., and some minor stocks.

„ 2½ per cent. Exchequer Bonds	418,300
„ 2¾ per cent.....	4,647,799
„ 3 per cent. Consols	329,896,856
„ 3 per cent. Reduced Ann.	77,151,474
„ 3 per cent. New Annuities	180,053,129
„ 3½ per cent. New Annuities	225,746
„ Bank of England 3 per cent.	11,015,100
„ Bank of Ireland 3 per cent.	2,630,769
	£638,849,693

II.—TERMINABLE ANNUITIES.

These are sums paid for a certain number of years, and then terminating altogether. As these Annuities are the chief instrument by means of which the debt is reduced, it may be shortly explained that under various Acts of Parliament, and under varying conditions, the Treasury is empowered to give an Annuity for a certain number of years in exchange for permanent stock. Thus A transfers to the Treasury £1,000 of 3 per cent. stock on which he has been receiving £30 a year; the Treasury in return undertakes to pay A £60 a year for twenty years or thereabouts. The Treasury cancels the £1,000 stock, and thus reduces, say, Consols by that amount; but during twenty years it pays a much larger sum than it would have paid if it had left matters alone. At the end of the twenty years the payment of this sum ceases, and the result of the transaction is that the debt has been then bonâ fide reduced by £1,000. The plain meaning of the transaction is, of course, that the Treasury binds itself to pay off a certain portion of principal every year for a given number of years. At the end of the time the principal is paid off, and the Debt is correspondingly reduced.

When the capital of the Debt is computed it is of course necessary to ascertain the capital value of these terminable Annuities. For this purpose the Government actuary calculates the amount of three per cent. stock equivalent in value to the terminable Annuities. In making this calculation a price has to be assumed for 3 per cent. stock, and it has been a matter of discussion among experts what that price should be, and thence the returns laid before Parliament do not always exactly correspond. The variation, however, is not so great as seriously to affect the comparisons of the immense sums involved in a statement of the Debt.

The total amount of the Terminable Annuity Debt, 31st March, 1886, at its capitalized value, was £85,829,917.

III.—UNFUNDED DEBT.

The Unfunded Debt consists of loans which the Government is bound to pay off at certain dates, and is represented by Exchequer bills, Exchequer bonds, and Treasury bills. These loans have currency for periods varying from a few months to five or more years. The amount outstanding 31st March, 1886, was £17,602,800.

The Consolidated Fund is also liable for claims on account of unclaimed dividends, balances in the Court of Chancery, &c., amounting to between four and five million pounds.

The following Table exhibits the variation in amounts of the Funded and Unfunded Debts, with the capitalized value of Annuities computed as Three per Cent. Stock from 1861 to the present time.

GROSS ESTIMATE, £21,172,936; NET, £18,233,200.

THE following table gives at one view the estimated cost of this branch of the public service for three years. Comparing the average, £20,078,050, with the Civil Service Estimates, it appears that for military purposes alone our expenditure is £2,069,359 in excess of that estimated to be required for the whole of the seven non-productive classes of that service in 1886-87.

Year.	Gross Estimate.	Appropriations in aid.	Net Vote.	Supplementary.	Expended.	No. of Men.
	£	£	£	£	£
1884–85	18,575,416	2,644,816	15,930,600	3,209,500	18,224,901	143,314
1885–86	20,485,799	2,735,099	17,750,700	100	—	177,194
1886–87	21,172,936	2,939,736	18,233,200	—	—	151,867

The number of Regular Forces at home and in the Colonies is 141,284; army reserve, 56,900; militia, 141,333; yeomanry, 14,405; volunteers, 254,038. The total of all branches, including the Regular Forces on the Indian establishment (68,196), is 676,156, of whom 608,040 are classed as "effectives" in the latest returns.

In the following six divisions, an arrangement not now adopted in the Estimates, the gross total of each vote is given, and in the subsequent details will be found a comparison with the principal items of the previous year, and the net amount of each vote after deducting "Appropriations in Aid":—

18. Half-Pay of Field Marshals, and of General, Regimental, and Departmental Officers.—The total after deducting £10,300, to be received to meet the non-effective charges for the forces serving in India, is £79,700, an increase of £1,700. Eighty-two field marshals and general officers eligible for employment receive half-pay amounting to £50,000, and 147 regimental officers receive half-pay amounting to £34,000, while the departmental officers number 17, and receive £6,000 as half-pay.

19. Retired Pay and Gratuities for Reduced and Retired Officers, &c.—Deducting £211,400 on account of the forces in India, £4,500 refund of over-regulation money, and £90 miscellaneous receipts, the balance is £1,187,400—decrease £6,900. The retired and unattached pay of 306 general officers amounts to £266,000; 1,548 regimental officers receive £410,000 as retired pay, and 325 receive £141,923 as retired full pay and allowances. From the total of the last two amounts a saving of £23,923 may be effected during the year. Departmental officers, numbering 841, receive £291,000 as retired pay and allowances. Gratuities in lieu of pensions amount to £90,000; the cost of maintenance of lunatic officers is £400; retired pay to officers of disbanded foreign corps £800; and annuity paid to the National Debt Commissioners for advances made in commutation of pay £115,289. Compensation to be awarded by the Army Purchase Commissioners to officers on retiring amounts to £103,900; and to Royal (late Indian) Artillery and Engineers £8,000.

20. Widows' Pensions, &c.—From the gross estimate £26,150 is deducted for the forces in India and miscellaneous receipts, leaving the balance £129,700, an increase of £4,900. Pensions to 1,892 widows and relatives amount to £130,000; compassionate allowances to 1,718 children £23,000; gratuities and relief fund £2,850.

21. Pensions for Wounds.—Wounded officers and others number 143, their pensions amounting to £16,277, with a probable addition of £723; repayments to National Debt Office, for commutation advances, £1,364. Appropriations in aid amount to £1,464.

22. Chelsea and Kilmainham Hospitals.—Appropriations in aid, amounting to £540, reduce the gross estimate to £32,200, a decrease of £900. Chelsea Hospital requires £27,845—decrease £780; and Kilmainham £4,895. At Chelsea a Governor receives £500 additional pay, and other officials cost £3,198; subordinates £1,200; 32 nurses £999; pay of 538 in-pensioners £1,416; provisions, clothing, &c. £14,950; secretary's salary £700; clerks, &c. £4,054. At Kilmainham the cost of provisions (except bread and meat, provided for in Vote 10) is £1,660.

23. Out-Pensions.—The expenditure consists of £1,762,000, paid to 232 warrant officers and to 83,491 Chelsea pensioners, at from 1½*d.* to 4*s.* 6*d.* a day; commuted pensions to men settling in the Colonies £100; the maintenance of lunatics £12,200; and pensions to 130 army schoolmistresses and nurses £3,300. From the gross estimate £410,400 is to be deducted for the forces in India, and £300 for miscellaneous receipts, leaving the net vote £1,372,100, an increase of £42,100.

24. Superannuation, &c. Allowances.—The total, less £74, appropriations in aid, amounts to £188,000; superannuations being £91,000, compensations £67,000, and compassionate allowances and gratuities £1,300, to which is added £28,774 to be paid to the National Debt Commissioners for commutations. The amount voted in 1885–86 for allowances was £162,008, of which £8,418 has since lapsed, leaving £153,590 as the resulting charge. In 1885–86 111 new pensions were granted, amounting to £8,589, of which £60,820 is for foremen, artificers, &c. The proportion of superannuation for Metropolitan Police is £2,584.

25. Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers.—The total of £50,900 shows an increase of £1,000. Of this sum £19,469 will be paid to 176 retired Militia officers; £2,062 to 17 retired Yeomanry Cavalry adjutants, £17,162 to 129 retired Volunteer adjutants, and £11,359 to the National Debt Commissioners for advances.

Amount Estimated for 1886-87 (gross), £13,650,626. (Expended in 1884-85, £11,625,809, voted in 1885-86, £12,694,900.)

GROSS ESTIMATE, £13,650,626; NET, £12,993,100.

THE following tabular statement gives at one view the cost of this branch of the public service for three years, and shows the net total of the present year to be an increase upon its predecessor of £298,200, the principal additions being made to Votes 1, 2, 6, 10, and 17. The average annual expense for the three years now stands at £12,418,656:—

Year.	Gross Estimate.	Appropriations in Aid.	Net Vote.	Supplementary (net).	Expended.	No. of Officers and Men.
	£	£	£	£	£	Seamen.	Marines.
1884–85	11,595,711	783,941	10,811,770	756,200	11,625,809	44,550	12,400
1885–86	13,146,928	760,428	12,386,500	308,400	—	48,600	12,900
1886–87	13,650,626	657,526	12,993,100	—	—	48,500	12,900

The estimated "Appropriations in Aid" for 1886-87, £657,526, include the sum of £199,138, "Extra Receipts," which under the arrangement in force prior to 1882 would have been paid into the Exchequer.

In this country all religions are tolerated and free, but there are two State Churches:—I. Episcopal, in England and Wales: II. Presbyterian, in Scotland.

The Established Church in England is an episcopal institution, governed by 2 Archbishops and 31 Bishops. The Archbishops and 24 of the Bishops have seats in the House of Peers. Four new Bishoprics have recently been created, and two more, Bristol and Wakefield, will be formed as soon as the necessary funds are subscribed. A large proportion of the episcopal property is managed by Commissioners, who pay fixed incomes to the prelates, ranging from £15,000 to the Archbishop of Canterbury, to £2,000, which last is the income of the Bishop of Sodor and Man, who, however, is not a peer of Parliament. The inferior dignitaries of the Church are the Deans, of whom there are 30, with incomes varying from £3,000 at Durham to £700 at Bangor, the average of the whole being £1,450. As assistants to the Bishops there are 85 Archdeacons, who commonly hold other preferments, their archidiaconal incomes being but small. Under the Archdeacons there are 613 Rural Deans, who exercise an unpaid supervision over the parochial clergy. The number of Benefices is about 13,500; and the clergy of every class, from the Archbishops to the stipendiary Curates and Clergy unattached, number about 23,000. The revenues of the Church are not accurately known. Some estimates have valued the Church property and settled income alone at £10,000,000, but this is a gross exaggeration. The total income from all sources—endowments, tithe, glebe, rent value of residences, pew rents, and surplice fees—may be stated at nearly £7,250,000. A very competent authority pronounces this valuation as being nearly double the net amount received by the clergy. No religious census has been officially taken in England, but the Church population is estimated on trustworthy data at over 13,500,000, and about 6,200,000 church sittings are available for them. In addition to the Bishops holding sees, there are 24 retired Colonial Bishops, whose services are available upon emergencies.

In Ireland the Protestant Episcopal Church is now separated from the State. Its revenues were taken away, due provision being made for all interests existing on the 1st of January, 1871, the time when the Act came into force.

In the Colonies, &c., the Church numbers 65 bishops and about 3,400 clergy. The first colonial see established was that of Nova Scotia, in 1787. The first East Indian see was Calcutta, founded in 1813; West Indian sees, in 1824. The episcopate of Australia dates from the establishment of the see now called Sydney, in 1836; and that of South Africa from 1847. Connected with the Church are a number of missionary bishops in countries not subject to the British Crown.

The Established Church of Scotland is Presbyterian in principle, and is governed by Kirk Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and the General Assembly, which consists of both clerical and lay deputies from each of the Presbyteries, and representatives from the universities and royal burghs. It is presided over by a Moderator (chosen annually by the Assembly), and the Sovereign is represented by a Lord High Commissioner (appointed each year by the Crown), who receives the sum of £2,000 for his services. The country, for Church purposes, is divided into 16 synods and 84 presbyteries, and there are about 1,660 ministers and licentiates engaged in ministerial work. The Churches and Preaching Stations number 1,560, and the Church population equals that of all the other Presbyterian bodies united, and is estimated at about half the whole population of Scotland. By it the sum of £340,177 was raised in 1881 for home and missionary purposes. Within the last 27 years 304 chapels, at a cost of £1,067,000, have been endowed and erected into parishes quoad sacra. The original parishes were 924, in addition to which there were in 1881 304 new and 40 Parliamentary parishes, also 163 unendowed churches and 129 preaching and mission stations; a total of 1,560, being an increase of 322 over the strength of the Church at the time of the secession of 1843. The Presbyterian form of Church government was first set up in Scotland in 1560, but was superseded in 1662 by the Episcopal Church under the Stuarts. At the Revolution in 1688, Presbyterianism regained the legal establishment which it still preserves. In consequence of the decision of the House of Lords on the subject of patronage in 1843, about 270 Parish ministers resigned their preferments. In 1874 the obnoxious Patronage Act of 1711 was repealed, and each Church now elects its own minister. The Rt. Rev. John Cunningham, D.D., of Crieff, is Moderator, and the Rev. Dr. Hutchison, of Banchory, is Moderator elect.

The Free Church of Scotland, founded in 1843, is based on two great principles:—(1) The independence of the Church in its spiritual action, and (2) the non-intrusion of ministers, each congregation having the right to elect its own minister, and the power of rejecting any one of whom it disapproves. The circumstances that led to the formation of this Church have been already mentioned. The sum of £367,000 was raised in the first year of the disruption, which was divided between a sustentation and a church and school building fund, and by 1853 no less than 850 congregations had been formed. At the present day the Free Church is a fully organized body, consisting of a General Assembly, 16 synods, and 73 presbyteries. There are 1,097 ministers, with 1,019 congregations, meeting in well-appointed churches built for them. There are also about 50 preaching stations. The General Assembly meets every year at the same time as that of the Established Church. Having no endowments, the clergy are mainly supported by the Sustentation Fund, which gives on an average £222 to each minister, three-fourths of whom are also provided with manses. The sum of £626,028 was raised in 1884–85 for the various purposes of the Church, including Missions. Moderator for the year 1886–87, Rev. Dr. Somerville, of Glasgow, and the Rev. Principal Rainy is Moderator-elect for 1887–88.

Presbyterianism has several subdivisions. The chief of these are:—

(1) The United Presbyterian Church, which has 32 presbyteries, 560 churches, 598 ministers, and about 181,146 members in Scotland and Ireland, who raised £367,915 in 1885 for its purposes. It has many missionaries in the East and West Indies, in Africa, China, and Japan.

(2) The Presbyterian Church in Ireland. According to the Census of 1881 the members of the various Presbyterian churches in Ireland were 485,503. The largest of these, under the superintendence of the General Assembly, consists of 36 home presbyteries, 626 ministers, 552 congregations, with 102,855 communicants, 78,027 families, 8,797 Sabbath-school teachers, and 100,156 scholars. During the year 1885-86 this branch contributed £156,828 for religious, charitable, and missionary purposes. It possesses two Colleges, with a staff of 14 professors, and has 12 ordained missionaries in foreign parts. MODERATOR for the year, Rev. Robt. Ross, Londonderry. Clerk, Rev. John H. Orr, Antrim.

(3) The Presbyterian Church of England has 10 presbyteries, 286 congregations, 9 preaching stations, and 61,021 communicants. It has a theological College in London, and supports 30 missionaries abroad, including 6 females. In 1885-86 the amount raised for various purposes was £216,106. The Rev. David MacEwan, D.D., of London, is MODERATOR of the Synod. Secretary, Rev. John Black, 7, East India Avenue.

(4) The less numerous divisions are: the Reformed Presbyterian Synod, the Eastern Reformed Synod, the United Original Seceders, the Secession Presbytery in Ireland, and the Synod of the Church of Scotland in England.

The ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH is, next to the Church of England, the most numerous of all the religious communions in the United Kingdom. The members in various parts of Great Britain may be computed at about 2,000,000. In Ireland (in 1881) they numbered 3,951,818 (see page 235).

WESLEYAN-METHODISTS. (See page 236.)

The INDEPENDENTS, or CONGREGATIONALISTS, come next to the Methodists; they are the most ancient community of Dissenters. They maintain that each Church is its own ruler, and thus dispense with both bishops and presbyteries. They first appeared in the time of Elizabeth, under whom they were very harshly treated; in consequence, great numbers repaired to North America; but their principles triumphed under the Commonwealth. In 1831 the majority of their churches were formed into the Congregational Union. There are 51 county and other Associations at home and in the Colonies, with 2,803 churches, and 1,378 preaching stations; ministers and missionaries, about 3,500. There are also 102 Congregational Churches in Scotland, and 29 in Ireland. The number of members in the United Kingdom is supposed to be about 360,000, and the whole number of persons connected with the body may probably be about 1,250,000.

The Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion have 34 chapels. The tenets are very similar to those of the Independents, but in many chapels the prayers of the Church of England are read.

The BAPTISTS are, in all respects but one, similar to the Independents; they have the same form of Church government, and differ but in one point of practice—viz., the Baptism by immersion of believers only. Like the Congregationalists, they are for the most part grouped in Associations of churches, and the majority of these belong to the Baptist Union, which was formed in 1832. In Great Britain and Ireland there were, in 1885, 3,654 chapels and 1,893 pastors. The members numbered 315,939, and Sunday scholars 472,730. In addition to the members in this country, the Baptists have numerous chapels and several hundred ministers in the Colonies. In the United States they form one of the most numerous religious bodies there, the "members" alone numbering 2,500,000. The sums raised for missionary and benevolent purposes by the Baptists are estimated at over £200,000; their missionaries are mostly employed in India, but there are also missions in Ceylon, China, Japan, West Indies, Africa, Italy, and Norway.

The WELSH CALVINISTIC METHODIST ASSOCIATION embraces the majority of the Welsh-speaking population of the Principality. The form of Church government is Presbyterian. The body dates from the year 1735, one of the founders being Howell Harries, of Trevecca; but the members could not actually be called Dissenters till 1810 when ministers were for the first time ordained within the body; previous to this the members were in the habit of receiving the Holy Communion at various parish churches. At the present time the body numbers—chapels and places of worship, 1,383; ministers and preachers, 989; deacons, 4,483; communicants, 129,401; on probation, 5,112; Sunday-school teachers, 23,689; scholars and teachers, 185,392; number belonging to the congregations (including Communicants), 277,290. A sum amounting to £173,845 was collected for various religious purposes in 1884. One of the features of the Welsh churches is the Sunday-school, which is attended by adults as well as children: the vernacular is the language generally used in these schools. There are 171 English congregations with 9,621 communicants; all the rest are Welsh.

[It is remarkable that the Welsh Calvinists are the only body of Dissenters that have retained a definite Creed or Formulary of Faith. It is very simple—the Doctrinal Articles of the Church of England and the Apostles' Creed, together with the Assembly's Shorter Catechism. There is also a very noteworthy addendum that "No alteration in these tenets of Doctrines shall be at any time allowed or even discussed."—Constitutional Deed, 10th August, 1826.]

MINOR RELIGIOUS SECTS.—A complete list of these will be found at p. 237. The chief of these are the Unitarians, with about 340 ministers, 345 chapels, and 18 domestic mission stations. Although avowed Unitarianism does not show much apparent increase, its principles have spread widely amongst many religious denominations, and many clergymen now teach doctrines very similar to those held by the "orthodox" Unitarians at the commencement of the century. The Society of Friends, which consists of about 15,380 members, has 327 recorded ministers, and about 400 unrecorded; their places of worship in England and Wales are 317. The Moravians have 38 congregations and preaching stations, 5,727 members, and 3,363 scholars. The Catholic and Apostolic Church have above 80 churches, the New Jerusalem Church (Swedenborgians), 64 societies, with 5,622 registered members; the Latter-Day Saints (Mormons) have 82 churches. Among the inhabitants of the United Kingdom are above 60,000 Jews, mainly in London and other large towns, who possess 80 synagogues, with about 100 ministers and readers. The Jews support their own poor, and raise nearly £150,000 annually for religious and benevolent purposes. The Brethren, or Plymouth Brethren, have 23 places of worship in London and the suburbs. The Free Church of England has about 40 churches or preaching stations. The Greeks have churches in London, Manchester, Liverpool, Cardiff, Reading, and Wolverhampton. The Armenians have churches in London and Manchester; and the French, Dutch, Swedes, and Swiss in London, Norwich, and Canterbury.

GENERAL SYNOD.

Consisting of House of Bishops (13) and House of Representatives (viz., 208 clerical and 416 lay).

Honorary Secretaries, Rev. Canon M. W. Jellett, LL.D.; Ven. W. E. Meade, D.D.; H. A. Hamilton, J.P.; C. F. Ferguson, B.A., J.P.

Secretary to the Representative Church Body (Incorporated 1870), Thomas Greene, M.A., 52, St. Stephen's Green East, Dublin.

The Church of Ireland.—The following particulars respecting the condition of the Irish Church at the present time will be interesting to those persons who desire to prevent Disestablishment in England and Wales, equally with those who desire to promote that measure.

The Church of Ireland, which by the Act of Union became united with the Church of England on the 1st of January, 1801, was separated from the Church of England, disestablished, and to a large extent disendowed, on the 1st of January, 1871, by the Irish Church Act of 1869.

Of the former property of the Church of Ireland, £5,376,362 has been appropriated by various Acts of Parliament, as follows:—To intermediate education, £1,000,000; pension fund for National School teachers, £1,300,000; distress works, £1,266,000; Royal University of Ireland, £600,000; arrears of rent, £950,000; sea fisheries, £250,000; distressed poor-law unions, £10,362.

The supreme governing body of the Church of Ireland is the General Synod, which meets annually, and is composed of the Archbishops and Bishops, and 208 clerical and 416 lay representatives.

Subject to the General Synod are 21 Diocesan Synods, which are assisted in the management of the affairs of their respective dioceses by smaller elected bodies called Diocesan Councils.

Every male member of the Church of Ireland, over 21 years of age, may become a registered vestryman. The registered vestrymen of each parish elect a select vestry, who manage the secular affairs of the parish. They also elect lay representatives for the Diocesan Synod.

The incumbent of the parish is appointed by a board of nomination, consisting of 7 persons, viz:—The Bishop, 3 diocesan nominators (2 clerical and 1 lay) appointed by the Diocesan Synod, and three parochial nominators (lay) appointed by the registered vestrymen of the parish.

The Bishop of the diocese is chosen by the clerical and lay members of the Diocesan Synod. The Primate is chosen by the bench of Bishops from amongst their own number.

The financial trustees of the Church are the representative body, composed of the Archbishops and Bishops, 13 clergymen and 26 laymen, chosen by the Diocesan representatives in the General Synods, with 13 co-opted members (clerical or lay). This body holds the property of the Church, and administers its funds, subject to the General Synod.

The number of members of the Church of Ireland in 1881 was 639,574.

The Book of Common Prayer, in use by the United Church of England and Ireland before Disestablishment, has been revised and slightly altered by the General Synod, for the use of the Church of Ireland, the 39 Articles of Religion remaining unchanged.

Shortly after Disestablishment the Church Commissioners, in whom the entire Church property was vested by the Act of 1869, paid over to the Representative Body about seven and a half millions of "commutation money," charged with annuities, to the then existing clergy, amounting to about £600,000 a year. A further sum of half a million capital was similarly paid as compensation for private endowments. The invested capital now held by the Representative Body is over seven millions, the income from which is £290,000 per annum. The annual contributions for five years past have averaged £163,000. The amount contributed since Disestablishment is three millions and a quarter. The Commutation Fund is now reduced to two millions, and the annuities to £130,000. The stipends under the new system, which have been gradually replacing the annuities, now amount to nearly £220,000 per annum.

Worcester.—

The members of the House of Laymen are elected by the various Diocesan Conferences, who were themselves elected by the Laity of their respective Parishes or Rural Deaneries. London, the most populous Diocese, returns ten members, three other Dioceses six each, and the remainder four each. Besides the elected members, the Archbishop of Canterbury has the power of nominating ten other members. Like Convocation, the House of Laymen is elected with every fresh Parliament.

In theory the Church of England is governed by means of its Convocation of Bishops and Clergy. There is a House of Convocation for each province, Canterbury and York. That of Canterbury consists of two Houses: the upper is confined to the bishops; the lower is composed of the dean of every cathedral, the archdeacons, with proctors elected from every cathedral chapter, and two more elected by the clergy of every diocese. In York there are two Houses, but the bishops, deans, archdeacons and proctors sit together. A fresh election of proctors is made with every new Parliament.

The Methodist Churches.

Under the general designation of Methodists are included all those religious bodies which owe their existence, directly or indirectly, to the efforts of the Revds. John and Charles Wesley. The most numerous and influential of them are,—

Wesleyan Methodists, the original body founded in 1739 by these two brothers. While students at Oxford, in 1729, they gathered a number of young men together for purposes of study and devotion, who were nicknamed, first, "The Holy Club," and afterwards "The Methodists." In 1739 John Wesley founded the "Religious Societies," in which the first beginnings of Methodism are to be found. The number of members rapidly increased, until a more definite and extensive organization than Wesley at first gave them was imperatively demanded. The first Conference, consisting of six persons, all clergymen, was held in 1744. The Conference is now composed of 240 ministers and 240 laymen, with a ministerial president and secretary at its head, elected year by year; by semi-annual meetings of the ministers in each district, over which a chairman is appointed by the conference; and by quarterly meeting of the ministers and lay officers of each circuit. The authority of both these last meetings is subordinate to the Conference, which has the supreme legislative and judicial power in Methodism. When Wesley died the number of members was 76,968, and since then the increase has been so great that above 15,000,000 people are said to be now receiving Methodist instruction in various parts of the world. President, Rev. R. N. Young, D.D.; Sec., Rev. D. J. Waller.

Various distinct bodies of Methodists have been formed, the most important being these:—

1. The Methodist New Connexion, which was formed in 1797, by the Rev. Alexander Kilham; the original difference between it and the parent body being the different degrees of power allowed to the laity.—President, Rev. W. J. Townend.

2. The Primitive Methodists, who sprang up in Staffordshire, in 1810, under the leadership of Hugh Bourne. Next to the Wesleyans they are the most numerous of all the denominations which have arisen out of the Methodist movement.—President, Rev. J. Atkinson.

3. The Bible Christians, founded in 1815 by William O'Bryan, a Wesleyan lay preacher in Cornwall. They exist principally in the West of England.—President, Rev. A. Trengrove.

4. The United Methodist Free Churches, which are an amalgamation of three different secessions—the Protestant Methodist, formed in 1828; the Wesleyan-Methodist Association, which sprang out of a controversy in 1834, concerning the training of ministers; and the Wesleyan Reform Association, founded in 1849, during a great agitation in the Wesleyan societies. The union was effected in 1857. President, Rev. T. Sherwood.

The following table does not include the Methodists of America, Canada, Australia, the West Indies, and other British colonies.

Finances.—The amount raised for sustentation by the Methodist bodies can only be approximately estimated. The Wesleyans raised in 1885-86 £138,165 to sustain their very extensive missionary operations. At the same time their Home missionary income was £37,789; £21,832 were expended on the education of ministers' children at the Connexional schools; £289,301 were contributed in Great Britain for chapel-building; and £11,321 for the training of candidates for the ministry, of whom there are 180 in the four theological colleges. By the Methodist New Connexion the following sums were raised: For chapel fund, £660; for missions, £6,004; for Home Missions, £921. The Primitive Methodists raised £26,062 for new chapels, and the United Methodist Free Churches £21,248 for their missions.

The number of places of meeting for Religious Worship, certified, recorded, and on the register on the 4th November, 1886, was 24,597, an increase of 618 in the year. Those marked (*) appear in the list this year for the first time. These descriptions are taken from the original certificates sent to the Registrar-General for procuring the registration of the room or building; and it will be observed that the same sect is in some instances variously described.

UNIVERSITIES is the name given to those institutions which agree in being close corporate bodies for the promotion of the higher branches of learning, and in possessing the right of granting degrees in several faculties, such as arts, science, law, medicine, theology, and philology. As a general rule the corporation includes also a body of lecturers or teachers for the instruction of the students, but the University of London shows that such is not a necessary part of the institution. In the common acceptance of the term, universities are of comparatively modern origin, no degrees having been granted earlier t an the twelfth century; while the term University itself, in its present sense, is of still more recent date. In a document of the year 1201 the following phrase is to be found applied to Oxford:—Universitas magistrorum et auditorum ("the whole body of masters and listeners"), but even here the peculiar technical meaning of the word University is not to be understood. The university, as we now use the term, is simply a conglomeration of colleges, originally entirely distinct, and still only linked together by reason of their being in the same city and incorporated under the same charter. The early history of the colleges themselves is obscure; probably they were founded by charitable persons for the furtherance of religion and learning. The student life of the university has passed through four distinct stages of growth. First, the common bonds holding them together were those of study and discipline, and the students lodged wherever they could; afterwards hostels or boarding-houses were founded by the several religious fraternities, each for the members of its own order—where some kind of superintendence over the scholars was exercised. After a time, these hostels began to be endowed by rich donors, so that poor scholars might enjoy free lodgings; and, lastly, when further sums of money were left for the payment of a certain definite number of students, they were gathered together into one group of buildings, and the foundation of the college was complete. When various colleges in the same town or city came to gain renown as a seat of great learning, they often became imperceptibly welded into one nominal whole, and were known as the University of the city in which they were situated. In this way, almost simultaneously, grew up the three oldest universities of Europe, viz., those of Bologna, Paris, and Oxford. At first they were entirely independent of both Church and State, and were absolutely free and self-governing corporations; however, as the ecclesiastical influence increased, their individual power waned; the Pope granted bulls of confirmation to such as already existed, and granted or refused permission for the formation of new ones. With the Reformation the Pope naturally lost in Protestant countries the power, formerly his, of regulating the universities. The colleges forming the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge are academical institutions, often richly endowed with revenues, and whose fellows, lecturers, and students live and work together in their own set of buildings and under their own head. The president of each college (who is known variously as Warden, Master or Provost, Principal or Rector) forms, together with the rest of the governing body, the teachers, and the students, a corporation independent, not only of the other colleges, but also of the university. Certain graduates who are maintained by the bequests of particular founders are known as fellows, and postmasters, scholars, exhibitioners, and prizemen are the names of classes partly supported by the college funds; while most of the colleges include chaplains, choristers, and clerks or sextons. Each college is ordinarily administered, according to the statutes of the foundation, by the Head and his fellow-officers, while disputed cases are decided by the visitor, who is a bishop or lord. The income attaching to a fellowship has in general to be given up when the holder is appointed to a living, or inherits any estate of larger revenue, or upon marriage—this last being explicable by the fact that all those colleges which were of Roman Catholic origin were founded in order to supply the Church with ministers.

The Universities of the United Kingdom may be broadly divided into three classes, viz.: (1) the residential universities, in which attendance at particular lectures is necessary to the taking of a degree, as Oxford and Cambridge; (2) the non-residential universities, which also demand attendance during certain terms, as the Scottish Universities; and (3) those which are simply examining bodies, as London University.

The University of Oxford is a corporate body, and has been known for some centuries by the style and title of "The Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford," a title which was confirmed by the charter granted by Queen Elizabeth in 1570, though it has been urged that the university received an earlier royal recognition at the hands of Henry III. In 1604 the elective franchise was conferred upon it, since which time it has enjoyed the privilege of sending two members to Parliament. The number of colleges and halls forming the university has fluctuated considerably in the course of years; for example, early in the 14th century there were only three colleges and 300 halls; 200 years later there were twelve colleges and fifty-five halls; while at the present day there are twenty-one colleges, three halls, and two private halls. The university has always been governed by statutes of its own making, which for centuries were simply a confused chaotic mass; but, since the chancellorship of Archbishop Laud, by a digested code under the name of "Corpus Statutorum Universitatis Oxoniensis," which, after being carefully compiled by special delegates, was solemnly ratified in Convocation. A New Code of Statutes, however, was approved by Queen Victoria in Council in 1882. The whole business of the university in its corporate capacity is transacted by the Hebdomadal Council, and two distinct assemblies, known technically as the House of Congregation and the House of Convocation. Congregation includes all those professors, resident doctors, heads of colleges or halls (or their deputies, and deans, and censors), of colleges who are members of Convocation, together with all doctors and all masters of arts for two years from the term in which they are admitted; while Convocation is made up of all those who have been admitted to regency, provided their names have been constantly kept on the books. The functions of Congregation are to grant ordinary degrees, and to ratify the nomination of examiners by the Nominating boards; while Convocation confers all honorary degrees, elects to nearly all the offices in the gift of the university, gives the final sanction to all new statutes, and transacts the greater part of the formal business of the university in its corporate capacity. The students at Oxford are classified thus:—Scholars, Exhibitioners, Postmasters, Demies, Bible Clerks, and Commoners; in each college they dine together in one large hall, but take their other meals in their own rooms. The average annual expense of a fairly economical student at Oxford may be put down at £200. The degrees conferred by the University are those of Bachelor and Master of Arts, and Bachelor and Doctor of Music, Medicine, Civil Law, and Divinity. Twelve terms of actual residence are necessary for the degree of B.A.; no further examination is required for the M.A. degree, and no residence whatever is required for a degree in Music. Among the celebrated institutions connected with the university are the Bodleian Library, the Radcliffe Library and Observatory, the Schools, the Clarendon Press, and the Taylor Institution. In 1885, the students who matriculated amounted to 749, while 522 took their B.A. and 343 their M.A.; and the total number of members on the books of the university was 11,204.

The University of Cambridge is said to date from the seventh century, though it was not until the thirteenth century that it received an authentic charter, and its first college was founded in the reign of Henry III. Some important rights were granted to it by Edward III. in 1333, and in 1430 the Pope (Martin V.) invested it with exclusive jurisdiction over its own scholars. In 1565, Queen Elizabeth bestowed additional privileges; all preceding grants were confirmed, and the university was declared to be incorporated under the title of "The Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge." It is an incorporation of students in all and every of the liberal arts and sciences, and contains seventeen colleges and two public hostels, founded "for the study of learning and knowledge, and for the better service of Church and State." The whole of these are maintained by the endowments of their several founders and benefactors; each of them is a corporate body, and is bound by its own statutes, but is likewise controlled by the laws of the university, which are paramount. A new Code of Statutes for the University was approved by Queen Victoria in Council in 1882. In each of the colleges there are eight separate orders: these are (1) Head; (2) Fellows; (3) Noblemen graduates, doctors in the several faculties, bachelors of divinity, masters of arts and masters of law, who are not upon the foundation; (4) Bachelors of Arts, Physic, and Law; (5) Fellow-commoners; (6) Scholars; (7) Pensioners, forming the great bulk of the students; and (8) Sizars, students of narrow means, and in receipt of various emoluments. The head of each college has supreme disciplinary authority in educational matters; and he, together with the foundation fellows, form the governing body. The great legislative assembly of the university is called the Senate; it is composed of all those who have obtained the degree of Doctor or Master, and whose names are still on the register, and the high executive officers of the university. There is a council of the senate (consisting of the vice-chancellor and sixteen members of the Senate, of whom eight vacate their office every year, the office being held for two years), by whom every university "grace" or decree must be approved before it is offered to the Senate. A residence of nine terms is required from each student before taking the B.A. degree, and "honours" may be obtained in any of the following:—Mathematics, classics, moral sciences, natural sciences, law, history, theology, Semitic, Indian, and modern languages. The university possesses a library of more than 200,000 printed volumes besides MSS., the Fitzwilliam Museum, the Observatory, the Botanical Garden, and the Anatomical School. James I. granted to the university the privilege of sending two members to Parliament, which it has ever since enjoyed. In 1886, the number of students who matriculated was 650, while the members on the boards amounted in 1885 to 12,290.

Scotland possesses four universities, namely, those of St. Andrews, Aberdeen, Edinburgh, and Glasgow, and the general regulations as to graduation are common to all. The University of Edinburgh was founded in 1582 by a charter granted by James VI. of Scotland, and in 1621 the Scottish Parliament ratified to it all the privileges enjoyed by other universities in the kingdom. This ratification was confirmed in the Treaty of Union between England and Scotland, and again in the Act of Security. The constitution was, however, modified by the Act (1858) relating to the Scottish Universities, and the University of Edinburgh is at the present time a corporation consisting of a chancellor, rector, principal, professors, registered graduates, alumni, and matriculated students. The students matriculating each year now amount to more than 2,000. The essential qualification to graduation at a Scottish university is attendance at certain special series of lectures or classes. The course for the Arts degree extends over four winter sessions, each lasting from the beginning of November till about the middle of April; and the degree of M.A. is conferred on all who have completed their course and passed the ordinary examinations in Latin and Greek, mathematics and natural philosophy, logic and metaphysics, moral philosophy, rhetoric, and English literature. The faculties of this university are arts, laws, medicine, divinity, and science. The buildings were until recently very deficient in the necessary accommodation, but much has been done of late years, and is still being done, in the way of improvement. The library contains nearly 140,000 volumes and 700 MSS., and there is also a theological library of 10,000 volumes. In connection with the various faculties there are different bursaries, scholarships, and fellowships, tenable from one to four years, and ranging in value from £2 10s. to £160. The University of St. Andrews was founded by Henry Wardlaw, Bishop of the diocese, in 1411, and was confirmed by a Papal Bull of Benedict XIII. in 1413. During the 15th and 16th centuries three colleges were established in connection with it, viz., St. Salvator (1455), St. Leonard (1512), and St. Mary (1537). All the colleges had originally teachers both in philosophy (or arts) and in theology, but in 1579 the two older of them were confined to philosophy, and that of St. Mary to theology. In the year 1747, St. Leonard and St. Salvator were united by Act of Parliament. The Universities of Edinburgh and St. Andrews unite in sending a representative to Parliament.

The University of Glasgow was founded by a bull of Pope Nicholas V. (1450–51), with the power of creating doctors and masters, and enrolling readers and students, the whole of whom were to enjoy the same rights and privileges as the University of Bologna. At first it had neither property nor endowment, but in 1460, James, Lord Hamilton, bequeathed to the then Regent and his successors a tenement in the High Street, with four acres of land adjoining for the "use of the College of Arts." Between 1577—when a new charter was issued—and the Restoration, the university flourished in every way, but the re-establishment of episcopacy detached from it a large part of its revenues, and many of its professorships were abandoned. In 1864 the old buildings were sold for £100,000, and a government grant of £120,000 was obtained; these amounts, together with public subscriptions and college funds, were laid out in the new buildings now to be seen at the west end of the city. The University of Glasgow includes four faculties, viz., arts, theology, law, medicine; it was reconstituted, as were its fellow universities, by the Act of 1858, and, conjointly with the University of Aberdeen, sends one member to Parliament.

The present University of Aberdeen derives its origin from two distinct foundations, viz., University and King's College of Aberdeen, founded in 1494 by William Elphinstone, Bishop of Aberdeen, under the authority of a Papal bull; and Marischal College and University of Aberdeen, founded (1593) by George Keith, Earl Marischal, by a charter afterwards ratified by Act of Parliament. In 1860, by another Act of Parliament, the two foundations were united and incorporated into one university and college, under the title of the University of Aberdeen. The four faculties are arts, divinity, law, and medicine; and at the end of the arts curriculum scholarships and prizes are given of the annual value of about £1,000. The university library contains more than 80,000 volumes.

Of a different type altogether is the University of London, which was first incorporated by Royal Letters Patent dated December 5, 1837, the royal charter being issued in 1863, and a supplemental charter in 1878. So far as the functions of a university are concerned, this is simply an examining body which, by reason of its unquestionable integrity and its severely high standard, has gained an excellent reputation. The fees are moderate, ranging from £2 to £10, and there are no honorary degrees whatever. The various faculties are arts, science, medicine, law, and music; and the matriculation and the pass examinations in arts and in science are held at a large number of provincial colleges, while the bi-annual matriculation examinations are also held at several colonial centres. The corporate body of the university includes the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, fellows, and graduates; and the colleges forming the university are University College and King's College. In 1886 the number taking the B.A. degree was 176, and the M.A. degree, 11; while the number of those who passed either of the matriculation examinations was 1,067.

Of late years much has been done in the way of extending university teaching and advantages. Both Oxford and Cambridge now hold what are called "Local" Examinations, senior and junior, in many parts of the country, and the certificates granted to the successful candidates are accepted in different branches of business and the professions as equivalent to a guarantee of competency from an educational point of view. The University of London, too, not to be behind in the march of progress, has arranged a definite scheme, which is now in full working, for the inspection and examination of schools other than primary, to be conducted under the direction of the Senate. More than this, however, the older universities have organized what is known as the "University Extension Lectures," given in many parts of the kingdom by some of the most successful lecturers of Oxford and Cambridge, and which may be attended by students on the payment of a very small sum.

But the most noticeable feature in the progress of higher education is the growth of university colleges in all directions. The majority of our large towns have now each its own college or school of science, and, until the year 1880, it seemed to be only a question of years before the country would be covered with a too numerous body of young and unnecessary Universities. Fortunately for the status of the home degrees, in that year both Oxford and Cambridge passed statutes enabling them to affiliate colleges to themselves subject to certain well-defined conditions; and since that time, two well-known provincial institutions, St. David's College, Lampeter, and University College, Nottingham, have taken full advantage of the new regulations. The movement was, however, too late to serve the cause as well as it deserved, for University College, Liverpool, and Owens College, Manchester, had already united and obtained for themselves a charter of incorporation under the style and title of Victoria University; and the university colleges of Wales, at Aberystwith and Bangor, are striving to attain a similar status.

OPENING UP OF THE UNIVERSITY.—PRIVATE HALLS.—In 1855 a statute was passed, allowing any member of Convocation, above the age of 28 years, to open, under certain conditions, a "suitable building as a private hall for the reception of academical students," with the title of Licensed Master. There are at the present time two private halls.

NON-COLLEGIATE STUDENTS.—For 400 years previous to 1855, no person could be a member of the university who did not belong to a college or academical hall. In 1868 this restriction was removed, and persons were permitted, under certain conditions, to become members of the university, and be admitted to its degrees, without belonging to a college or hall. These are now called "non-collegiate students."

AFFILIATED COLLEGES.—In 1880 a statute was passed by which "any college or institution within the United Kingdom, or in any part of the British Dominions, being a place of education in which the majority of the students are of the age of 17 at least, may, under certain conditions, be admitted to the privilege of affiliated colleges." St. David's College, Lampeter, in 1880, and University College, Nottingham, in 1882, have availed themselves of this privilege.

UNIVERSITY EXAMINATION FOR WOMEN.—In 1884 a statute was passed allowing the delegates of local examinations to "use the several honour schools of the university for the purpose of the examination of women." Two halls are now established in Oxford for the higher education of women, and some of the members avail themselves of the above statute, and are also admitted to the lectures of the university professors.

NONCONFORMIST COLLEGE.—In 1886 a college for the education of Nonconformists was commenced in Oxford, with the title of Mansfield College, and several professors and lecturers of the university have offered to open their lectures to the students. Prin. Rev. A. M. Fairbairn, D.D.

THE BANKERS' CLEARING HOUSE.

The BANKERS' CLEARING HOUSE, in Post Office Court, Lombard Street, is the medium through which Bankers obtain the amount of Cheques and Bills in their hands for collection from other Bankers. Instead of presenting their cheques at each Banking House, and receiving cash and notes in payment, Clearing Bankers settle the whole amount delivered during the day at this establishment by receiving or paying the difference in their amount by a single cheque on the Bank of England. As every Bank in London and the Country is represented by Clearing Bankers, who, as agents, send through the Clearing House all drafts payable in the City and in the Country, the amount passing through this channel is enormous. The total for the year ending December 31st, 1885, was £5,511,071,000, and for the year preceding £5,518,071,000. The establishment is managed by a Committee, of which R. C. L. Bevan is Chairman, Sir John Lubbock Hon. Sec.; the acting managers being George Derbyshire, Chief Inspector, and John C. Pocock, Deputy Inspector. For an account of the amount of work done at the Bankers' Clearing House during the past ten years see Appendix, page 584.

BANK OF ENGLAND, FOUNDED 1694.

The Bank of England was the first Joint-Stock Bank established in England, and having exclusive privileges in the Metropolis, granted by Royal Charter, it continued the only Joint-Stock Bank in London until 1834. At this date the London and Westminster Bank was founded, and proceeded so successfully that it was quickly followed by the formation of the London Joint Stock, the Union Joint Stock, London and County, &c. At the present time the total capital paid up and reserves of the various Joint Stock Banks amount to more than £150,000,000.

THE following brief table gives an abstract of the Area, Population, Revenue, and Commerce of the British Empire throughout the World.* Brief as it is, it deserves careful study. The material greatness of the Country is amazing—it exceeds that of any other Empire Ancient or Modern. But the moral greatness is still grander. The Empire is governed by settled Law, every man's property is protected; his person, like his property, cannot be touched except by legal process. Religion is free. And although susceptible of many improvements, the British Empire under its present Sovereign presents the nearest approach to a true Commonwealth that has yet been seen.

The figures are approximate only.

The British Isles consist of Great Britain (England, Scotland, and Wales) and Ireland, and lie between the 49th and 61st degrees of N. latitude, and the 2nd degree of East and the 11th degree of West longitude. The total area is 121,115 square miles, with a population in 1881 of 34,884,848, which by the time of the next census in 1891 will probably increase to 40,000,000.

England, which may be roughly said to be divided from Scotland on the north by the Cheviot Hills and the Rivers Tweed and Solway, and from Wales by the Severn and Dee, has an area of nearly 51,000 square miles, and an estimated population of 26,370,586. Wales has an area of 4,712,281 acres, and a population (1881) of 1,360,513. Except in the west and the north, England is for the most part a level country, so cultivated as to be highly productive. The other districts have mineral riches, including iron, tin, lead, copper, and coal, which make abundant amends for the poverty of their surface. Wales is generally mountainous, and also possesses great mineral wealth.

Many learned men have taken pains to ascertain the various human races that have in succession occupied parts of the British Islands. The most approved conclusions seem to be, that the southern and eastern parts of England have a population mainly derived from Belgic Gaul, whilst the western districts and Wales have been peopled from the West of France and the North of Spain. Ireland and Scotland are believed to have been peopled by a race originally Belgic, but which country received its population from the other is a point that has been acrimoniously discussed, and probably admits of no positive solution. This alone is certain, that when the Romans first came to our shores the inhabitants might have been roughly divided into two sections: those who lived inland, and who may with some reason be called Celtic colonists, were a race of hunters and shepherds, dressed in the skins of beasts, and inhabiting huts made of rude wicker-work and covered with rushes; whereas the coast-dwellers were, probably, of Gallic origin, with some approach towards civilization, and holding intercourse, for purposes of trade, with foreign merchants visiting the island. These conclusions, however, only apply to very early times, and we know from history how very mixed the populations of our islands have now become. Neglecting the Romans, who were no more than mere military garrisons, and mingled little with the natives—much like Europeans in the East at the present day—we have the Saxons and Jutes established from Kent to Devonshire, and the Angles (and subsequently the Norsemen) from the Thames to the Tweed. The Norman Conquest brought in a mixed multitude from the Continent; the wars of Stephen introduced a numerous body of Flemings, who were by Henry II. settled in Wales; and the commercial views of Edward III. led to the establishment of a still larger body of the same people as clothworkers in Kent. Political and religious dissensions have had a great share in bringing in new races, for Dutch, French, and other refugees and their descendants exist among us in such numbers as perceptibly to modify the national character. Germany is still sending an annual contingent of industrial citizens. France, Italy, Poland, Greece, and other countries also contribute, but, unlike the Germans, they can hardly be considered as permanent settlers. Defoe, alluding to our mixed origin in his "True-born Englishman," says ironically:—

"With easy pains you may distinguish
Your Roman-Saxon-Danish-Norman English."

* When this Almanack was first published there was not a single Colonial Atlas; all contained a map or maps of Jerusalem, and probably of the Holy Land. Most contained one of Canada—a portion of the country only—and a very poor map of Australasia. Now a great change has taken place, and publishers are worthily vying with each other in the production of colonial maps and atlases. We wish them all success in their various undertakings.

The western part of England was known to the Phœnicians, and was resorted to by them for its tin, four centuries or more B.C.; hence the whole country received the name of the Cassiterides, or Tin Islands. When invaded by Cæsar (B.C. 55) it was called Britain (perhaps derived from Prydain, the name of an early chief of great power), or sometimes Albion, that is, the White Land, from the white cliffs on many parts of the coast. The Romans subdued all England, and parts of Scotland and Wales, but did not reach Ireland, though its existence was known to them. In the third century of the Christian era, when the power of Rome was on the decline, small bodies of adventurers from the opposite coasts settled in various parts, and made such devastations that an officer called "the Count of the Saxon Shore" was appointed to withstand them. This proved impracticable. The immigrants daily increased in number, the Britons themselves revolted, and at last, about A.D. 410, the Romans abandoned the island after a rule of about 400 years, traces of which still remain in every quarter. These may best be observed in the names of many of our most ancient towns, in the great roads that reach from end to end of the country, and in the remains of Roman buildings and architecture from time to time unearthed in different places. For example, every town whose name consists wholly or in part of cester, caster, or chester (derived from Latin castra, a camp) marks the site of one of those wonderful entrenched camps for which the Roman armies were famous. Thus, we have Lancaster, Chester, Manchester, Cirencester, Gloucester, Tadcaster, Worcester, Doncaster, Porchester, Dorchester. Then the military roads, straight, broad, and splendidly made, are still to be traced. There were four of these, viz., Watling Street, running from the coast of Kent by way of London, to Carnarvon; the Foss—or Fosdyke—from Cornwall to Lincoln; Ikenild Street, from Tynemouth, through York and Derby, to St. Davids; and Irmin Street, from the last-named spot to Southampton. The remains of Roman buildings are too numerous to be specified, but it may be worth while to note that in many parts, in London for instance, examples have been found of the beautiful tesselated pavements and luxurious baths of the Romans; while at Brading, in the Isle of Wight, an excellent specimen of a Roman villa has been brought to light. The Britons being divided into as many hostile States as they had cities, were unable to resist the fresh hordes (now called Saxons and Angles) that poured into the island, and about A.D. 457 the kingdom of Kent was founded. The Britons still fought stubbornly, but were gradually driven westward, and by the year 584 the kingdom of Mercia (meaning the march-land, or frontier State) was established, being the last of the seven kingdoms founded by the invaders—whence the whole is usually styled the Heptarchy. The kings of the Heptarchy made war on each other, but at last, in 827, Egbert of Wessex obtained the supremacy of the whole, and styled himself King of England. His descendants, of whom Alfred the Great was the most illustrious, held the throne for more than 200 years, but the country suffered greatly during the time from the ravages of the Danes, who, under Canute and his sons, became its rulers for 25 years (1017-1042). The Saxon line was restored in the person of Edward the Confessor, to whom Harold succeeded; but his death in the Battle of Hastings, on the 14th October, 1066, gave England into the hands of the Norman kings, who reigned from 1066 to 1154. Then came the Plantagenets (1154-1485), the Tudors (1485-1603), and the Stuarts (1603-1714), to whom the House of Brunswick succeeded on the death of Queen Anne. Her present Majesty is the sixth sovereign of that line.

The conquest of Ireland was begun in the year 1170, but can hardly be regarded as completed until the surrender of Limerick in 1691. Wales was conquered by Edward I. in 1282, and formally annexed to England by Henry VIII. in 1536. Scotland successfully resisted the efforts of Edward I. to subjugate it, maintained for ages a close alliance with France, and in 1603 gave a ruler to England in the person of James VI., who became James I. of Great Britain, a title then first assumed. This was but a personal union, but the union of the kingdoms was effected under Queen Anne in 1707. Ireland, which had been hitherto only styled a lordship, was declared a kingdom in 1542; and this kingdom was united to that of Great Britain by the Act of Union, on Jan. 1st, 1801, the empty title of "King of France," which the English kings had borne since the time of Edward III., being then wisely abandoned.

The form of government is a limited monarchy, consisting of the Sovereign and the Houses of Lords and Commons, without whose joint approval no legislative measure is complete, though a large discretion is left to the Executive. For the proper exercise of this discretion the Ministers of the Crown are responsible, as it is a legal maxim that "the Sovereign can do no wrong." For administrative purposes England is divided into 40 counties, Wales into 12, Scotland 33, and Ireland 32. To each of those counties there are, with some few exceptions, a lord-lieutenant and a sheriff, and a number of justices of the peace, besides stipendiary magistrates in London and other large cities. The religious organization of the country, its universities, its government, departments, judges, &c., will be found described under their respective heads.

The Colonial Possessions of Great Britain will be found described in subsequent pages. Here it will be sufficient to remark that Newfoundland was the earliest English colony founded, and Virginia the second. The secession of the United States of America caused a great diminution of the extent of these possessions, but the loss has since been more than made up by the acquisition of Guiana, Cape Colony, Malta, and vast possessions in India, the West Indies, the formation of settlements in Australia, New Zealand, &c., which now number more inhabitants than the thirteen united colonies contained when they shook off their dependence on the mother country.

It may be well, however, to note here that the possessions of Great Britain have been obtained in four distinct ways. Some were conquered and seized in war, as Gibraltar and the Cape of Good Hope; some were ceded by treaty, as Newfoundland; others were purchased, while yet others, as Newfoundland and the various Australian Colonies, are real settlements.

The Army of the British Empire (including the reserves, and exclusive of the forces in India) was on Jan. 1, 1886, estimated at 607,960.

The Navy at the same period was 56,744 men, boys, and marines; or, including coast-guard, reserves, and volunteers, a total of 83,112, with 258 ships in commission.

THE entire Population of England and Wales is here given for 1881 (25,974,439), with the gross estimated rental as settled by the Assessment Committees in the Valuation Lists, the amount collected for the Poor Rate for the year ending Lady-Day, 1885, and the number of paupers who were actually in receipt of relief on Jan. 1st, 1886. The census of paupers shows an increase of 24,112, equivalent to 3·1 per cent. on the returns for Jan. 1st, 1885. The total cost was £8,491,600, as against £8,402,553 in 1884.

The sum raised by Poor Rates during the year ended Lady-Day, 1885, was £14,501,844; the receipts in aid, inclusive of Treasury subventions, amounted to £1,050,824, forming a total receipt of £15,552,668. £7,240,266 of this amount was expended for other purposes than the relief of the Poor; the payments towards the County, Borough, or Police Rate, for instance, amounted to £4,301,590; to Highway Boards, to £842,975, while the School Boards received £742,596. Other payments are made out of the Poor Rate. The actual relief to the poor for the year ended Lady-Day, 1885, amounted to 6s. 3d. per head of the estimated population, while the sum levied as Poor Rate during the same period was equal to a rate of 10s. 8¼d. per head.

The most northerly part of the island, divided from the south by the River Tweed, the Cheviot Hills, and the Solway Firth, is the ancient Caledonia or modern Scotland, a land naturally poor, and to a great extent bleak and barren, but inhabited by a race of men who have made the country productive, wealthy, and prosperous. It contains nearly 30,000 square miles, or 19,084,659 acres, of which not quite 4,500,000 are in a state of cultivation, with a population in 1871 of 3,360,018, increased to 3,735,573 in 1881.

After the Union with England in the year 1707, and the suppression of the Rebellion of 1745, the Scotch people generally awoke to the fact that the loss of their separate nationality was a gain; and being united to a wealthy neighbour, they with one accord determined to derive all possible benefit from the change. By means of an admirable banking system, capital was utilized. With wonderful ingenuity and perseverance a great commercial port, Glasgow, was opened in the west, Scottish citizens flocked south and into the British colonies, everywhere carrying with them their habits of industry and thrift. India especially became the scene of their operations, and notwithstanding any narrow feelings of national jealousy, it was seen that they were creators of commerce and producers of wealth. Education was widely diffused throughout the masses, while the Calvinistic religion, even if it did not in all instances produce piety, helped to promote thought and mental activity. At the Union the Scottish Church and Judiciary were left intact, and so, with slight modifications, have remained to the present day; both England and Scotland borrowing something from each other and gradually assimilating.

The oz. Tron was equal 641·6337 Imp. Troy grains. The oz. Troy was equal 478·309 Imp. Troy grains.

SCOTCH LINEAL AND LAND MEASURE.

The Scotch ell was divided into 37 inches; and, though it has been found by accurate measurement to be equal to 37·0598 Imp. inches, yet it seems generally understood that it was meant to be equal to 37 Eng. or Imp. inches; 6 ells made a fall, and 4 falls, or 24 ells, made a chain. And in Land Measure, 36 sq. ells = 1 sq. fall, 40 falls = 1 rood, 4 roods = 1 acre. As the Scotch chain has long been made equal to 74 Imp. feet—

To convert Scotch into Imp. acres, multiply by 1·257116.

To convert Imp. into Scotch acres, multiply by ·795476.

Assuming the ell to be 37·0598 in., multiply by 1·26118, and by ·7929.

The Scotch mile = 80 chains = 80 × 74, or 74·1196 = 1973⅓ yards.

The barley firlot contained 31 Scotch pints, and was used for barley, malt, and oats.

IRELAND is an island lying between 51° 26′ and 55° 23′ N. lat. and 5° 20′ and 10° 26′ W. long. It is about 60 miles to the west of England. On three sides it is washed by the Atlantic Ocean, and on the east by the Irish Sea, or St. George's Channel. Its greatest length is, from north to south, 306 miles, and from east to west from 120 to 180, with an area of about 31,759 square miles, or 20,326,209 acres. The greater part of the surface is a plain, interspersed with low hills, the highest mountain being 3,414 feet above the sea-level. The rivers are numerous, the Shannon, 254 miles in length, being the principal; but the chief water feature of the country is the beautiful series of lakes or (as they are called) loughs, the largest, Lough Neagh, covering a surface of 98,255 acres. The harbours are among the finest in the world. The climate is temperate, and many plants which can only be grown in hothouses in England flourish in the open air in Ireland; while the great moisture which generally prevails is so favourable to vegetation that the country early received the name of the Green or Emerald Isle.

The population of Ireland on April 3, 1881, was 5,174,836. Unlike any other portion of the British dominions, it is on the decrease. In 1767 it was estimated at 2,544,276, in 1777 at 2,690,556, and in 1801 at 5,216,329. It was not till 1821 that the first complete census was taken, and the numbers were then found to be 6,801,827; in 1831 they had increased to 7,767,401, and in 1841 to 8,175,124. The highest point was reached in 1845, when the entire population was estimated at 8,295,061. The potato crop, upon which all the agricultural and many of the manufacturing poor depended for their subsistence, having failed for two successive years, produced famine and disease, which carried off large numbers, and gave a great impulse to emigration, so that from 1845 the population rapidly decreased. In 1851 there were 6,552,385 persons in the country; in 1861, 5,798,564; in 1871, 5,412,377; and in 1881 but 5,174,836. Since 1845 the decrease has been 3,120,225; equal to 37·6 per cent. From May, 1851, to the end of December, 1885, no fewer than 3,051,361 persons of both sexes and of all ages went abroad—as many as 105,743 left in 1883; the annual average for the past ten years has been about 62,000, of whom the greater part found their way to the United States, where they were warmly welcomed by the Americans. At first they readily found employment, and became absorbed in the general population, but at the present time their presence is not regarded with the same favour.

In many respects Ireland is far behind Great Britain, not only in manufactures, commerce, and agriculture, but also in those other sources by which a nation is enriched and her population made prosperous and happy. The coasts abound with fish, but this source of wealth is much neglected. The mineral riches of the country, such as coal, iron, &c., are undeveloped; and there can be little doubt that one-fourth more corn, cattle, and other agricultural produce might be raised and exported. The Irish people, unlike the Scotch, are too much in the habit of expecting assistance from this country in those matters in which they should help themselves. Had they the same persistent industry and self-reliance as the Scotch, the country would present a very different appearance from what it does.

The Government is semi-independent. A Lord-Lieutenant, appointed by each successive Ministry, exercises almost regal sway. He has a salary of £20,000, but being usually a nobleman of large private fortune, his expenditure is frequently much more than the amount received. The peerage consists of 177 members, who are represented in the Imperial Parliament by 28 of their number; and 103 members represent the country in the House of Commons.

The prevailing religion is Roman Catholic, 78 per cent. of the population professing that form of faith. Until the year 1871 the Established Church was a branch of that of England, with two archbishops and ten bishops, although the members of this communion were but 11 per cent.—9 per cent. of the remaining Protestants being Presbyterians.

Ireland is well supplied with educational establishments, having three universities, a large number of endowed schools, and an admirable system of Mixed Schools where children of all denominations are taught.

The legal establishment is similar to that of England, and is presided over by a Lord Chancellor.

Although Ireland was annexed in 1170, it was not properly brought under English rule till the time of William III., and even then was permitted to retain a certain amount of apparent independence, one of the most cherished forms of which was the Native Parliament which existed for more than 300 years, and was extinguished at the time of the Union in 1801. For many years it met at irregular intervals, but in 1781 it received an increase of privilege, and during the last eighteen years of its existence made itself heard, although few of its acts appear to have been beneficial to the country. Still its very existence flattered the national sentiment, and its extinction was bitterly resented; the cry for home rule and for the repeal of the Union was persistent, although it is only of late years that the demand has been made with sufficient vigour to be listened to by leading statesmen.

It is on all sides admitted that for many years the Irish people were badly governed and had much to complain of; and in point of fact they have never been without a grievance, real or imaginary. For centuries the Roman Catholics, who form the chief part of the inhabitants, were subject to many disabilities; these were greatly alleviated by the passing of the Roman Catholic Relief Bill of 1829, and entirely relieved by the disestablishment of the Irish Church in 1870. British statesmen, both Liberal and Conservative, have for the past fifty years done their best to remove all real causes of complaint. It is possible as years roll on the past will be forgotten, and that the Irish people, as the Scotch have already done, will find that their connection with a rich country like England is of incalculable benefit to themselves.

At the time of the Union, Ireland was a very important national factor, much more important than at the present time. The population of England and Wales was then but 9,060,993, while the population of Ireland was 5,216,329, considerably more than half that of this country; while the population of Scotland was only 1,625,000, and of the entire Island, 10,689,933. And as the entire population of the United Kingdom was but 15,808,322, that of Ireland formed a proportion of no less than 33 per cent. of the whole.

In 1886 the relative proportions had completely changed, for of the 36,707,418 inhabitants of the United Kingdom there were but 4,887,439 in Ireland, so that instead of 33 per cent. the proportion was but 13·317. Scotland, which in 1801 was but 1,625,000, had in the mean time sprung up to 3,949,393, and apparently its population will soon be larger than that of Ireland.

Tried by another test it will be seen that Ireland's place in the national economy is not high: its contribution to the Imperial exchequer being much below those of England and Scotland, and, but for its manufacture of whiskey, would be very low indeed. This is largely accounted for by the poverty of the great mass of the people, of whom no fewer than 442,289 were last year in a state of actual pauperism. There must be something radically wrong in this, for if the country could, as it did in 1845, support more than eight millions of people, there should not be any great difficulty for the five millions remaining in 1887. The following table will show the amounts contributed by the three countries in the year 1884–85:—

LORDS LIEUTENANTS, LORDS DEPUTIES, AND LORDS JUSTICES OF IRELAND.

The following list gives the names of those eminent persons who have held one or other of these high offices; but it must be understood that until comparatively recent times the title "Lord Lieutenant" was often honorary, being bestowed on young princes or others who never visited the country. The actual rulers were the "Deputies," or "Lords Justices," when the government was intrusted to a committee (as is now done on the occasional absence of the Lord Lieutenant). Of these honorary governors may be mentioned: Edward, son of Henry III., 1252; George, Duke of Clarence, 1461; Richard, son of Edward IV., 1479; Edward, son of Richard III., 1483; the Earl of Lincoln, 1484; Henry, son of Henry VII., 1494; the Duke of Richmond, 1530; and the Duke of Albemarle, 1660.

When the Irish kings made their formal submission to Henry II., in 1171, he took the title of Lord of Ireland, and appointed Hugh Lacy its Custos, or Governor, with a military colleague, Richard de Clare (better known as Strongbow), who was called the Warden. In 1181 John Lacy and Richard Peche had the government committed to them under the name of Lords Justices. In 1185 they were superseded by Prince John, who was styled, by grant from his father, Lord of Ireland; he, however, retired in a few months, leaving the government in the hands of Hugh Lacy, the younger, as his Lieutenant, the first mention of that title. In 1194 we find a Deputy first named Peter Pipard. King John exercised the government of Ireland in person in 1210, as did Richard II. in 1393 and 1399. Lionel, Duke of Clarence, also acted in person in 1361 and 1366; as did Roger, Earl of March, in 1395; Thomas of Lancaster, afterwards Duke of Clarence, in 1401 and 1408; Edmund, Earl of March, in 1423; and Richard, Duke of York, in 1449. In 1700 the title "Lord Lieutenant" was given to the Earl of Rochester, and there has been but one Lord Deputy since his time. The Deputies have the letters "L.D." added to their names:—

LONDON was a place of importance under the Romans, and was famed for its vast conflux of traders and its abundant commerce even in the first century of the Christian era. From the Romans it received municipal institutions, which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was in reality a small independent State, and its burgesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hastings. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them; and about eight years after he granted a charter, which is still preserved. It is addressed to William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve, and all the Burgesses, and promises that they shall be "law worthy" (i.e., possessed of privileges) as they were in the days of Edward the Confessor. The Portreeve, however, received the Norman title of Bailiff, which, in 1189, was changed to Mayor; the first holder under the new name being Henry Fitzalwyn, who filled the office for 24 years. On his death a new charter was granted by King John, in 1214, which directed the Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever since been done, though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of "Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality four times, A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1409); and modern cases occur with Alderman Wood, 1815, 1816; Sir John Key, 1830, 1831; Alderman Cubitt, 1861, 1862; and Alderman Sir R. N. Fowler, 1883, 1885. The title of Lord Mayor was first bestowed in 1354 on Sir Thomas Legge by Edward III.

Aldermen were first appointed by a charter of Henry III. in 1242, and were elected annually until 1394, when a charter of Richard II. directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council was at an early date substituted for a popular assembly called the Folkmote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 14 members, and none less than 4. Sheriffs (as well as aldermen) were Saxon officers, who usually had charge of a large district. The time of their appointment for London is uncertain, but it is commonly placed in A.D. 1189. At first they were only the officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but Edward IV., whose cause was favoured by the citizens of London, gave them, in the first year of his reign, permission to choose their own Sheriffs, as is now done. The Sheriffs are chosen on Midsummer Day, and enter on office at Michaelmas, on which day the Lord Mayor is elected, who is sworn into office on November 8, and is on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, Westminster, to take the final declaration of office—the pageant, conducted with some degree of civic state, being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show. The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is mentioned as a royal officer in 1195: when he became a civic official is not known; but the Town Clerk (called Common Clerk) and Common Sergeant are mentioned as "ancient" officers in the Charter of Edward II. (A.D. 1319).

The Metropolitan Board of Works was constituted by the Metropolis Management Act of 1855. Under this and subsequent Acts it has carried out several special works, such as the Main Drainage of London, the construction of the Victoria, Albert, and Chelsea Embankments on the Thames, the formation of Queen Victoria Street and Northumberland and Shaftesbury Avenues, the freeing of the Thames bridges in the Metropolitan area, the clearance of many sites for Artizans' Dwellings, &c. It has opened up or widened leading thoroughfares, such as Garrick Street, Southwark Street, Burdett Road, Holborn (Middle Row), Park Lane, Shoreditch, Great Eastern Street, Harrow Road, Coventry Street, Tooley Street, the improved thoroughfare from Piccadilly to Hart Street, Bloomsbury, and thence to Shoreditch, &c.; formed Finsbury and Southwark Parks; and preserved open spaces, such as Hampstead Heath, Blackheath, Shepherd's Bush, Hackney Downs, Clapham Common, &c. Among the works now proceeding are the widening of Upper Street, Islington; the continuation of Fitzjohn Avenue, Hampstead, to the Heath; and other widenings in Bethnal Green, Tower Hill, Bermondsey, and Walworth; further clearance of sites for Artizans' Dwellings, a new bridge at Battersea, and an alteration of Hammersmith Bridge. Its principal general duties comprise the control over the formation of streets and the line of buildings therein, the testing of gas and gas-meters, the maintenance of the Fire Brigade (a force of 669 officers and men), the maintenance of the Main Drainage system, the Victoria, Albert, and Chelsea Embankments, the bridges over the Thames above Blackfriars (excluding Westminster), and various parks and commons. It is the "Metropolitan Authority" under the Water, Tramways, Petroleum, Artizans' Dwellings, Contagious Diseases (Animals), Slaughter-houses, Explosive Substances, and other Acts, and regulates the construction of theatres and music-halls for the protection of persons from fire. The Board borrows money and levies an annual rate. It borrows by the issue of "Metropolitan Consolidated Stock" for its own capital purposes, and also to provide loans to the School Board for London and other metropolitan bodies within the limits laid down by Parliament in the Board's Annual Money Act. The rate of interest on stock created up to the end of 1880 is 3½ per cent. per annum; on stock raised since, 3 per cent. per annum; dividends are payable quarterly. The fund for paying the dividends and redeeming the principal is under the control of Her Majesty's Treasury. The total money borrowed up to the 1st of January, 1886, was £35,282,373, of which £6,375,092 was advanced to other bodies. The balance of debt owing at the same date was £25,699,167, and the assets in loans owing to the Board and in surplus land were £9,324,586, less liability in redeeming stock at par £571,359, leaving the net debt £16,945,940. A portion amounting to not less than 1-60th is redeemed annually. The annual rate levied by the Board covers current expenses. It is relieved by the Coal and Wine duties which Parliament has allocated to its use up to July, 1888. The entire coal duty charged within the metropolitan police district and upon the river from Staines to Gravesend is 13*d.* per ton, of which 9*d.* is received by the Board and 4*d.* by the City. Members of the Board are elected by the respective Vestries and District Boards in the Metropolis. The Corporation of the City of London elects three members. Parliament increased the number of Representatives in 1885 from 45 to 57.

An important subject which has occupied the attention of the Board during the year is the treatment of the Metropolitan sewage at the outfalls into the River Thames, with a view to its purification. Experiments have been conducted at the Crossness outfall, and the opinions of independent chemists of the highest standing have been taken. It is now believed that by chemical treatment the sewage can be deodorized and purified to such an extent as to render its discharge into the river unobjectionable at all states of the tide. The Royal Commission which reported on the subject had recommended filtration through earth as the best mode of purifying the liquid after precipitation; but the acquisition of sufficient land to enable the vast quantity of London sewage to be effectually filtered through the soil, without nuisance, was found an insurmountable difficulty, irrespective of the question of cost. The deposit, after precipitation, is estimated to amount to 3,000 tons daily. When pressed, it will be reduced to 850 tons daily. The disposal of this enormous quantity is not easy. Burning has been tried, but the expense, to prevent nuisance, is prohibitory. The sludge will probably have to be carried away and cast into the sea, unless it can be applied for agricultural purposes. Deodorization is successfully performed, and will be continued until the establishment of a permanent method of treatment by precipitation.

The Board has continued to require wharf walls and banks of the River Thames, in the Metropolis, to be raised to prevent overflow. The height required is 5 ft. 6 in. above Trinity high-water mark. The preparations of plans necessitated the survey and taking levels of 41 miles of river frontage. Owners of 935 riverside properties have been served with notices: 873 have complied with the requirements, and works are in progress in other places.

The new Putney Bridge was opened in 1886. It is a broad and substantial structure of granite. It cost about £240,000. A new bridge to replace the old Battersea bridge, now removed, is about to be begun. Hammersmith Bridge is in course of reconstruction. A ferry across the river at Woolwich is being proceeded with. The Board has resolved to apply to Parliament in 1887 for power to form a subway, or tunnel, under the river, from Blackwall to Greenwich, at an estimated cost of £1,250,000.

The new thoroughfare from Piccadilly to Oxford Street is now opened, and named Shaftesbury Avenue. The street from Tottenham Court Road to Charing Cross is fast approaching completion. The old block of houses on Tower Hill, between Postern Row and George Street, is removed. The total length of new streets sanctioned throughout the Metropolis during the year 1885-86 is about 17 miles.

No new Theatre or Music Hall containing an area exceeding 500 square feet, can be opened without a certificate from the Board. Ten certificates were issued last year. There is a limited jurisdiction over the older theatres and music-halls. The whole of the theatres existing in 1878 have now been put in what is considered a satisfactory structural condition.

The question of the continuance of the Coal and Wine Duties, which produce an income to the Board of about £325,000, is now before the public. They cease in 1889, and the Board will derive no benefit from the proceeds of the last year, which have been appropriated to the freeing from toll of Thames bridges outside London. If the duties are not renewed the Board's rate must increase by at least 2½*d.* in the pound. The duties are easily collected, have continued many years, and produce no irritation. The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Lord Randolph Churchill) received a Deputation of the Board and the Corporation on the 18th November, 1886, with reference to the renewal of the duties.

The rates levied by the Board during the last 5 years were:—1882, 6·24*d.*; 1883, 6·23*d.*; 1884, 6·50*d.*; 1885, 7·34*d.*; 1886, 6·89*d.*

From the establishment of the Board in November, 1870, up to the 15th November, 1886, accommodation in permanent schools had been provided for 374,006 children. In addition to this, schools with accommodation for 21,714 are in process of erection, or will be provided in the course of the next two years. At Lady Day last there were upon the rolls of the Board Schools (including certain schools transferred, and temporary schools), 379,525 children. The staff of teachers comprised 6,141 adult teachers, and 1,643 pupil-teachers and candidates. The fees charged by the Board range from 1*d.* to 6*d.*, and in one school 9*d.*; the number of school-places provided at 1*d.* being, according to a recent return, 79,621; 173,966 at 2*d.*; 92,708 at 3*d.*; 21,864 at 4*d.*; 5,647 at 6*d.*; and 600 at 9*d.* The charges are determined solely by what is believed to be the ability of the parents, and to avoid needless class distinctions they are made uniform in each school. When the census of all the schools in London was taken in 1871, whether efficient or non-efficient, the total number of children on the roll was 320,143. The number of children now upon the roll of efficient schools alone is 616,543; in other words, the roll of efficient schools alone is greater by 296,400 than the total roll of all schools whatever in the beginning of 1871. The number of children sent to industrial schools at the instance of the Board, up to Midsummer, 1886, was 10,884. In addition, 10,456 other cases had been inquired into by the Industrial Schools Committee, and referred to various voluntary agencies, &c., to be dealt with. The precepts for the year 1886-87 amount to £1,128,046 10*s.* 3*d.*, which is at the rate of 8⅞*d.* in the pound.

THE following list of Insurance Offices, with two or three unimportant exceptions, contains the names of all the British offices and of two companies founded in New York—but doing business in this country—with the premiums charged at various ages to secure the payment of £100 at death. Those offices having an asterisk prefixed transact Annuity as well as Life business. After the names are the figures (1) (2) (3) or (4). Those offices marked No. 1 are Proprietary or Joint Stock Life Companies; No. 2 are Proprietary Life and Fire Companies, and in three instances—those of the Commercial Union, the London Assurance Corporation, and the Royal Exchange, the business of Marine Insurance is included; No. 3 are Societies established on the principle of Mutual Insurance: that is, there is no proprietors' paid-up capital, the contributions of members being regarded as amply sufficient to meet all claims and contingencies; No. 4 are what are termed Industrial Life Offices, i.e., the Life Insurances transacted are wholly or for the most part for sums under £100, the premiums being usually payable by weekly or monthly instalments.

Persons wishing to insure their own lives—or, where legally or financially interested—the lives of others, are furnished with a paper containing questions respecting their age, habits, state of health, and other matters, all which questions must be answered truthfully; for if any wilful misstatement be made the policy may be vitiated, and the office can refuse to pay when a claim is made; thus all the sums contributed will have been thrown away. If the application for insurance be rejected on account of ill-health, or a tendency to hereditary disease, offices are to be found which will insure unsound lives, of course at a charge proportioned to the nature of the risk. Some tradesmen, e.g., publicans and butchers, are usually charged a higher rate than most others; a man in such business, aged say 35, may have to pay as though he were 40 or 45.

It should be impressed upon intending insurers that they cannot be too careful in the selection of an office. Safety should be the first consideration, economy second—although really first, for there is no economy in insuring in an unsound office, however low its premium may be. The rates differ, but in some offices where the premium appears high corresponding advantages are offered, and they may in the end prove quite as economical as other offices where lower rates are charged, for with the high rates of premium there are commonly some contingent advantages.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR LIFE ASSURANCES,

In the following Offices, at the ages of 25, 30, 35, 40, 45, 50, and 55, to secure the payment of ONE HUNDRED POUNDS at death; the assured participating in the profits in all named, except the Post Office and certain of the Industrial Life Offices. The first column of figures gives the amounts returned as Life "Assets" by the various Offices, in accordance with the provisions of the Act 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58; and the last column shows the number of years the Office has been established for the transaction of Life Insurance.

* Industrial rates of premium without profits.

The information now conveyed through the medium of the "Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870," which renders it imperative that every Life Office must furnish yearly to the Board of Trade a true state of its financial position, places within the power of every one of ordinary mental ability the means of ascertaining whether a Life Office is or is not financially if not actua-rially sound. Without going into further detail, and to meet ordinary popular requirements, a test as to solvency may be ascertained in answer to three questions:—1. Is the management and other expenditure within the sum set apart for that purpose? 2. Are the funds safely invested, and does the interest receivable thereon realize the percentage on which the premium tables are framed? 3. Are the death claims which arise within, in amount, the "Expectancy" table of mortality adopted by the Company? Where the experience of the Company shows that these three questions can be truthfully answered in the affirmative, then the business may fairly be regarded as conducted on a perfectly secure basis. And just in proportion as by a careful selection the death-rate is reduced below the expectancy, the rate of interest realized is beyond the assumed percentage, and the expenditure is less than the sum allotted—in the same ratio will the office be able to show profits fairly and legitimately realized.

The aggregate amount of Life and Annuity assets pertaining to the 32 Proprietary Life Offices named as above, exclusive of capital paid up, is £49,962,645, the capital amounting to £4,749,808, and the Life Insurances in force amounting, approximately, to £106,650,000. In the 25 Proprietary Life, Fire, &c. Companies, the aggregate amount of assets exclusive of capital is £34,177,456; capital £6,154,450. Insurances in force approximated £100,920,000. The Life and Annuity assets of the 22 Mutual Societies amount to £56,024,329; approximate amount of Insurances in force, £143,350,000. Of the 10 Industrial Life Companies (wholly or in part) the assets, exclusive of capital, are £4,608,842, capital £206,375; approximate amount of Insurances in force, £92,500,000.

The following is a summary of the foregoing figures:—

Class of Office.	No.	Premium Income.	Life & Annuity Funds.*	Capital Paid-up.	Amount of Policies in Force (approximate).

Fire Insurance.

Rates.—For merchandise at the principal ports, and for mills and manufactories and other leading industries throughout the United Kingdom all the offices charge the same, whilst for minor risks each office makes its own estimate, and charges the premium in its judgment applicable. The following is a digest of the scale put forward by some of the oldest companies, and the rates and classification are those which are generally adopted.

Common Insurances.—At 1*s.* 6*d.* to 2*s.* per cent. per annum, with certain exceptions.

1. Buildings covered with slates, tiles, or metals, and built on all sides with brick or stone, or separated by party-walls of brick or stone which are carried through the roof, and used for residence, or non-hazardous purposes.

2. Goods in buildings as above, such as household goods, plate, wearing apparel, and printed books, liquors in private use, and personal effects not comprised in the following categories:—

Hazardous Insurances.—At 2*s.* 6*d.* to 3*s.* 6*d.* per cent. per annum, with certain exceptions.

1. Buildings of timber and plaster, or not separated by partition walls of brick or stone, or not covered with slates, tiles, or metals, and thatched barns and outhouses, having no chimney, nor adjoining to any building having a chimney; and buildings falling under the description of common insurances, but in which hazardous goods are deposited, or hazardous trades are carried on.

2. Goods.—The stock and goods of bread-bakers, tallowchandlers (not melters), chemists, innholders, grocers, drapers, stationers, &c.

Doubly Hazardous Insurances.—At 4*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.* per cent. per annum, with certain exceptions.

1. Buildings.—All thatched buildings having chimneys, or communicating with or adjoining to buildings having one, although no hazardous trade shall be carried on, nor hazardous goods deposited therein, and all hazardous buildings in which hazardous goods are deposited, or hazardous trades carried on.

2. Goods.—All hazardous goods deposited in hazardous buildings, and in thatched buildings having no chimney; also china, glass, mathematical and musical instruments, pictures, and jewels in private use.

Much depends upon the surroundings of the building insured; for a printer's or bookbinder's workshop, in a narrow lane, with old wooden houses near it, the premium would possibly be from 10*s.* to 15*s.*

STATISTICS OF LIFE INSURANCE.—During the year 1884 the number of new Insurances effected in fifty-six offices was 61,134; the amount insured was £24,295,471, the average of each being about £397, and the amount of new premiums paid £849,279. The total amount insured in all the offices was about £500,000,000; the annual charge to policy-holders for premiums about £15,826,527; and the total income of the offices from premiums, interest on investments, and other sources, £22,783,554. The amount paid for claims in 1884 was £11,426,169. The total life and annuity assets of all the offices is about £149,000,000, and the expense of management varies from 5 per cent. to about 25 per cent.; in conducting what is termed ordinary Life Insurance, the average being 13½ per cent. The expense of conducting Industrial Insurance varies from 40 to 60 per cent.—the average being 43¾ per cent.

INTESTATES' ESTATES—Rules by which the Personal Estates of Persons Dying Intestate are Distributed.

If the Intestate die, leaving	His representatives take in the proportion following :—
Wife and child, or children	One-third to wife, rest to child or children; and if children are dead, then to the representatives (that is, their lineal descendants), except such child or children, not heirs-at-law, who had estate by settlement of intestate, or were advanced by him in his lifetime, equal to other shares.
Wife only, no blood relations	Half to wife, other half to the Crown.
Wife, no near relations	Half to wife, rest to next-of-kin in equal degree to intestate, or their legal representatives.
No wife or child	All to next-of-kin and their legal representatives.
No wife, but child, children, or representatives of them, whether such child or children by one or more wives	All to him, her, or them.
Children by two wives	Equally to all.
If no child, children, or representatives of them	All to next-of-kin in equal degree to intestate.
Child and grandchild by deceased child	Half to child, half to grandchild, who takes by representation.
Husband	Whole to him.
Father, and brother or sister	Whole to father.
Mother, and brother or sister	Whole to them equally.
Wife, mother, brothers, sisters, and nieces	Half to wife, residue to mother, brothers, sisters, and nieces.
Wife and father	Half to wife, and half to father.
Wife, mother, nephews, and nieces	Half to wife, one-fourth to mother, and other fourth to nephews and nieces.
Wife, brothers or sisters, and mother	Half to wife, half to brothers or sisters, and mother
Mother, but no wife, child, father, brother, sister, nephew, or niece	The whole to mother.
Wife, and mother	Half to wife, and half to mother.
Brother or sister of whole blood, and brother or sister of half blood	Equally to both.
Posthumous brother or sister, and mother	Equally to both.
Posthumous brother or sister, and brother or sister born in lifetime of father	Equally to both.
Father's father, and mother's mother	Equally to both.
Uncle's or aunt's children, and brother's or sister's grandchildren	Equally to all.
Grandmother, uncle, or aunt	All to grandmother.
Two aunts, nephew, and niece	Equally to all.
Uncle, and deceased uncle's child	All to uncle.
Uncle by mother's side, and deceased uncle or aunt's child	All to uncle.
Nephew by brother, and nephew by half-sister	Equally to per capita.*
Nephew by deceased brother, and nephews and nieces by deceased sister	Each in equal shares per capita, and not per stirpes.
Brother and grandfather	Whole to brother.
Brother's grandson, and brother or sister's daughter	All to daughter.
Brother and two aunts	All to brother.
Brother and wife	Half to brother, half to wife.
Mother and brother	Equally.
Wife, mother, and children of a deceased brother (or sister)	Half to wife, a fourth to mother, and a fourth per stirpes to deceased brother's or sister's children.
Wife, brother, or sister and children of a deceased brother or sister	Half to wife, one-fourth to brother or sister per capita, one-fourth to deceased brother's or sister's children per stirpes.
Brother or sister, and children of a deceased brother or sister	Half to brother or sister per capita, half to children of deceased brother or sister per stirpes.
Grandfather, no nearer relation	All to grandfather.

* That is, taking individually, and not by representation. Thus, if A. die, leaving three brothers or sisters, they each take an equal part of his effects in his or her own right. But if either of them die, leaving children, his children would take his share per stirpes, that is through him, and not in their own rights.

By the Act 19 & 20 Vict. all special local customs relating to the estates of intestates are abolished.

Expectation of Life.

In previous Almanacks tables were given showing the Expectation of Life, and the numbers of survivors out of a given number of births at each successive year of life. Those tables were constructed by the late Dr. Farr, of the General Register Office, and were calculated on the death-rates of 1838–54; but since that time very important changes have occurred in the death-rates at different ages, and consequently new tables have been constructed by Dr. W. Ogle, who succeeded Dr. Farr, on the basis of the death-rates of 1871–80. The following table gives the results both of the older and the later calculations; the first two columns in the male and female parts, respectively, giving the survivors at each year of life out of a million born of the corresponding sex, by the older and the newer calculation; and the two other columns giving similarly the expectation of life at each year:—

AGE.	MALES.				FEMALES.				AGE.
	Of 1,000,000 Born, the Number Surviving at the end of each Year of Life.		Mean After-lifetime (Expectation of Life).		Of 1,000,000 Born, the Number Surviving at the end of each Year of Life.		Mean After-lifetime (Expectation of Life).

The Eleventh Parliament of Queen Victoria elected on the new franchise proved, beyond doubt, the most sensational session of her Majesty's reign. On Jan. 12 Parliament formally opened, when the swearing-in of members and the election of Speaker were proceeded with. On the 21st of the same month her Majesty opened Parliament in person, when the speech from the throne was delivered. During the swearing-in of members the controversy with regard to Mr. Bradlaugh taking the oath was settled by that gentleman going through the ceremony in the usual manner, and the Speaker refusing to allow Sir M. Hicks-Beach—the then leader of the House of Commons—to raise any question with respect to the past conduct of Mr. Bradlaugh in the House. Although the Liberals had a majority over the Conservatives, the latter continued to keep their seats on the Treasury bench, Mr. Parnell's followers being silently acknowledged the arbiters of ministerial destinies. No sooner had the House of Commons been formed than it was apparent that the Irish question must be raised, and would be the feature of the session. Moreover, the rumours which were rife with regard to an alliance between Mr. Gladstone and the Irish Nationalists became more and more confirmed as the debate on the Address proceeded.

The Queen's speech did not contain anything of a definite character with regard to Ireland beyond referring to the attacks on the Legislative Union, which would be opposed, and stating that, if "the existing provisions of the law should prove inadequate to cope with the growing evils of organized intimidation," Parliament would be asked to grant further powers to the executive. Allusion, of course, was also made to foreign affairs. An inquiry into the Government of India was promised, and Bills were foreshadowed on the following subjects:—County Government for Great Britain and Ireland, the Sale of Glebe Lands, Land Transfer, Crofters' Grievances, Mines Regulation, Railway Rates, and Criminal Code, as well as a Royal Commission on the Education Acts, and an Inquiry into Parliamentary Procedure.

On January 25 Mr. Hunter moved an amendment to the Address with regard to expenses of the military operations in Burmah, which was negatived by 211 votes to 183. The following day saw the downfall of the Conservative Ministry. Previous to questions, Sir M. Hicks-Beach moved for leave to introduce a Bill to Suppress the National League. This resulted in the Nationalists supporting Mr. Jesse Collings's amendment on Small Allotments, which was carried by a majority of 79 against the Government. Mr. Gladstone was then called upon to form a Government. Both Houses reassembled on February 18, when Mr. Gladstone made a statement with regard to the business of the session, and ultimately the Address was agreed to. Just previous to Mr. Gladstone unfolding his Irish scheme to the House, the political excitement was intensified by the resignation of Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Trevelyan, whose places in the Government were filled by Mr. Stansfeld and Lord Dalhousie. Soon afterwards Lord Morley and Mr. Heneage retired from office. To a crowded House on April 8, amidst almost unparalleled excitement, Mr. Gladstone introduced his Bill "to Amend the provision for the future government of Ireland." His speech lasted nearly three hours and a half, and was considered a wonderful achievement. It was listened to by all sides with rapt attention. The debate which followed plainly indicated that the Premier would require all his strength to carry his new scheme to a successful issue, notwithstanding the support he received from the Nationalist members. The arguments advanced by Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Hartington, Mr. Trevelyan, and others of his old colleagues, daily gained fresh recruits to the "Unionist" cause. The introduction of the Land Purchase Bill, five days later, had the effect of further alienating followers from Mr. Gladstone's banner; and when the second reading of the Government of Ireland Bill was moved, on May 10, the downfall of the Gladstone Ministry was thought inevitable. The division was taken on June 7, or rather in the early hours of the following morning, in one of the most crowded houses ever known. At the end, however, the result was considered doubtful, owing to the waverers, and the wonderful influence which Mr. Gladstone exercised over the majority of his followers. The result of the division was announced amidst indescribable excitement, and the second reading of the Bill was rejected by a majority of 30; the figures being, for the second reading 311, and against, 341.

The other business of the session was quite eclipsed by the Irish question, which engaged the principal attention of members. One conspicuous and much-respected member passed away during the session, to the great regret of the whole House. Mr. Forster, who did great service to the Liberal party, died in the early part of April. Among the officials long connected with Parliament who died during the session were Lord Redesdale, Chairman of Committees in the House of Lords; Sir William Rose, Clerk of Parliaments; and Lord Farnborough. The latter, better known as Sir Thomas Erskine May, retired from the Clerkship of the House of Commons and was elevated to the peerage, but unfortunately died before taking his seat in the Upper House.

January 12. — Lords. Parliament opened by Royal Commission. The Lords Commissioners were the Lord Chancellor, Lord Iddesleigh, Lord Cranbrook, Lord Coventry, and Lord Barrington.

Commons. Mr. Peel re-elected Speaker.

January 13.—The Speaker read a letter from Sir M. Hicks-Beach, submitting that Mr. Bradlaugh should not be allowed to take the oath. Sir M. Hicks-Beach attempted to make a speech, but was ruled out of order. Some three hundred members, including Mr. Bradlaugh, were sworn, and inscribed their names on the roll of Parliament.

January 15.—House adjourned till 20th inst.

January 20.—Swearing-in continued.

January 21.—Lords. The session opened by the Queen in person. The address in answer to the speech from the throne moved by the Duke of Abercorn, and seconded by the Earl of Scarbrough. The Marquis of Salisbury, in reply to the criticisms of Earl Granville, defended the policy of the Government, and after some discussion the address was agreed to.

Commons. The address was moved by Viscount Curzon, and seconded by Mr. Houldsworth. Mr. Gladstone in the course of his speech alluded to Ireland, and urged that the question should be dealt with promptly. Sir M. Hicks-Beach said that the Government had not altered their views respecting the condition of Ireland. Mr. Parnell promised to state at the proper time the demands of the Irish party for the government of the country. Lord R. Churchill and Mr. Healy also spoke.

January 22.—Mr. Sexton continued debate on the address, and taunted the Conservatives with deliberately exciting certain hopes in the breasts of the Irish people in order to secure a majority at the polls. The Attorney-General for Ireland defended the passage in the Queen's speech relating to Ireland. The debate was adjourned. Ninety new Bills were introduced.

January 25.—Mr. Hunter moved an amendment to the address with regard to the military operations in Burmah, which, after some discussion, was withdrawn. Mr. Barclay moved an amendment, calling for reform in the system of land tenure, which was negatived by 211 votes to 183.

LORDS. Lord Kilmorey's resolution in favour of the abolition of the post of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland discussed, and subsequently withdrawn.

January 26.—The Land Registry Bill was read a second time, and, after the standing orders had been suspended, was passed through the remaining stage.

COMMONS. Sir M. Hicks-Beach gave notice to move for leave to introduce a Bill for the suppression of the National League. Mr. Jesse Collings moved his amendment to the address with regard to small allotments to labourers. After a long debate the amendment was carried by 329 votes to 250, the Government being defeated by 79 votes.

January 28.—Statements made in both Houses that Ministers had deemed it their duty to address a communication to Her Majesty.

February 1.—The resignation of the Ministry announced to Parliament, also that Mr. Gladstone had undertaken to form a Government. Both Houses adjourned to the 4th inst.

February 4.—Writs moved for the re-election of the new Ministers. Mr. Gladstone issued his election address.

February 9.—LORDS. Lord Herschell (late Sir Farrer Herschell) sworn in as a peer on his appointment as Lord Chancellor.

February 18.—Both Houses reassembled.

LORDS. Earl Granville announced that certain Bills would shortly be introduced. He refrained from making any statement as to the policy of the Government with regard to Ireland. His speech was criticised by the Marquis of Salisbury.

COMMONS. Mr. Gladstone made a statement, and said he hoped by the 22nd of March he would be in a position to state the policy of the Government with regard to Ireland. An amendment to the address, moved by Mr. Macfarlane, referring to the condition of the Highland Crofters, was rejected by 234 votes to 104. The address was then agreed to, and the Shop Hours Regulation Bill read a second time.

February 19.—Committee of Supply.

February 22.—Mr. Childers laid on the table the report of the Committee on the riots at the West-end. Mr. Gladstone moved the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into and amend the rules of procedure in the House. Discussion on Burmah. The Report of Supply agreed to.

February 23.—The Employers' Liability Act (1880) Amendment Bill was read a second time, and referred to a Select Committee.

LORDS. Discussion as to the constitution and condition of the Metropolitan Police.

February 24.—COMMONS. Debate on the Tenure of Town Houses (Ireland) Bill, which was withdrawn. The Copyhold Enfranchisement Bill read a second time.

February 25.—Mr. Trevelyan's Crofters' Bill read a first time.

March 1.—LORDS. The Lunacy Acts Amendment Bill and the Lunacy Bill were read a second time.

COMMONS. Committee of Supply. The Land Registry Bill passed through Committee without amendment, and was read a third time.

March 2.—Debate on the collection of labour statistics.

March 3.—Several private Bills were advanced a stage.

March 4.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply, a discussion on Irish affairs arose, during which the policy of the Government was challenged by the Opposition.

March 5.—On the motion for going into Supply, Mr. Labouchere moved an amendment for the Abolition of Hereditary Peers, which was negatived by 36 votes; 166 voted for, and 202 against.

March 8.—After a long debate the Crofters' (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

LORDS. Earl Granville stated that the Government had requested a Committee to resume consideration of certain proposals for the establishment of a line of British Mail Steamers from the City of Vancouver to Japan and Hong Kong.

March 9.—The Arbitration Bill, the Justices' Jurisdiction Bill, and the Law of Evidence Amendment Bill were read a second time.

COMMONS. The Manchester Ship Canal Bill was read a second time. Mr. Dillwyn moved a resolution in favour of Disestablishing the Church of England in Wales; to which an amendment was proposed by Mr. Albert Grey, in favour of the Church being reformed. The amendment was carried by 241 votes to 229.

March 10.—The Sale of Intoxicating Liquors on Sunday Bill, the second reading of which was moved by Sir Joseph Pease, was talked out.

March 11.—Committee of Supply. On the vote for the Royal Parks and Pleasure Gardens, Mr. Labouchere moved to reduce the vote by £50,403, the amount charged to the Imperial treasury for the maintenance of the London parks, which, he contended, should be kept up by Londoners. After some discussion, the amendment was carried by 131 votes against 114.

LORDS. The House agreed to the appointment of a Select Committee to join with a Committee of the Commons to inquire into the working of various Acts relating to India.

March 12.—COMMONS. On going into Supply a discussion arose on Trade depression, and the existing distress of the unemployed.

March 15.—On going into Supply, Lord C. Beresford proposed the expenditure of £5,577,000, to be provided out of the Sinking Fund, for the construction of a number of ships, thereby putting the Navy in a state of efficiency, and giving employment to skilled artizans and others in the ship-building ports. After a long discussion, the proposition was rejected by 206 votes against 98.

March 16.—Mr. Stansfeld's resolution for the repeal of the Contagious Diseases Acts, 1866–69, was agreed to without a division.

LORDS. The Parish Churches Bill read a second time.

March 17.—COMMONS. The second reading of the Church of Scotland Bill, moved by Mr. Finlay, was rejected by 202 votes to 177.

March 18.—Committee of Supply on the Navy Estimates.

March 19. — Committee on the Labourers (Ireland) Acts Amendment Bill.

LORDS. Lord Thurlow moved his resolution in favour of the Sunday opening of Museums. Viscount Midleton proposed an amendment declaring such opening to be undesirable. The resolution was carried by 76 votes to 62.

March 22. — The Justices' Jurisdiction Bill passed through Committee.

COMMONS. Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates. Previously Mr. Howard Vincent moved an amendment in favour of an immediate increase in the volunteer capitation grant, which was rejected by 187 votes to 166.

March 23. — A resolution condemning the present system of local taxation was, after an adverse amendment had been rejected, adopted by 216 votes to 176.

March 24. — Three Bills, dealing with the Tithe question, were read a second time, and referred to a Select Committee. The Durham Sunday Closing Bill read a second time.

March 25.—Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates. The second reading of the Contagious Diseases Act Repeal (No. 2) Bill agreed to without a division.

LORDS. Lord Denman's resolution in favour of opening Museums on Sunday, except during Divine service, negatived without a division.

March 26.—Two Bills to amend the Electric Lighting Act of 1882 were read a second time.

COMMONS. Mr. Gladstone informed Sir M. Hicks-Beach that his statement to be made on April 8 with regard to the Irish policy of the Government would be made with a view to admit of debate, and to procure the introduction of a Bill for the future Government of Ireland.

March 29.—LORDS. Discussion with regard to the cultivation of tobacco in the United Kingdom.

COMMONS. The resignation of Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Trevelyan officially confirmed. Committee on the Crofters' Bill.

March 30.—Mr. Henniker Heaton proposed a resolution in favour of an International Penny Postage, which was rejected by a majority of 131. Dr. Cameron's motion for the Disestablishment of the Church of Scotland defeated by 237 votes to 125.

LORDS. The Lunacy Acts Amendment Bill passed through Committee. The Idiots Bill read a second time.

COMMONS. Mr. Gladstone paid a tribute to the memory of Mr. Forster.

April 7. — The Church Patronage Bill — a measure to prevent the sale of advowsons and next presentations—was read a second time.

April 8.—Mr. Gladstone moved for leave to introduce his Bill to amend the provision for the future government of Ireland, which proposed to establish a legislative body to sit in Dublin for the conduct of Irish business. The greatest excitement and interest prevailed in the House, which was crowded in every corner, Chairs were placed across the gangway from the bar to the table, and it was stated that such a scene had not been witnessed at Westminster since the famous "No Popery" riots led by Lord George Gordon. The debate which followed Mr. Gladstone's speech was continued by Mr. Trevelyan and Mr. Parnell.

LORDS. The Compensation for Damage Bill was read a third time.

April 9.—During a debate on the motion for the second reading of the Poor Relief (Ireland) Bill, the loss sustained by the death of Mr. Forster was referred to by Earl Spencer, the Earl of Iddesleigh, and Earl Cowper.

COMMONS. Mr. Chamberlain resumed the debate on the Government of Ireland Bill, and indicated many of the reasons which induced him to leave the Cabinet. He also described the leading principles of an alternative scheme. Lord Hartington and Mr. Morley were among the subsequent speakers.

April 12.—Lord R. Churchill opened the adjourned debate on the Government of Ireland Bill. After criticising the scheme, he characterized it as involving "a complicated, inextricable, and multitudinous mass of contradictions and absurdities." Sir Chas. Russell, Mr. Burt, Mr. Bradlaugh, and Mr. Whitbread also spoke.

April 13.—Mr. Goschen resumed the debate on the Government of Ireland Bill, and was followed by Mr. Arch, Mr. De Cobain, Mr. E. R. Russell, Lord E. Hamilton, Mr. Bickersteth, Mr. E. Robertson, Sir M. Hicks-Beach, and Mr. Gladstone, who wound up the debate. Leave was given to introduce the Bill.

LORDS. Lord Rosebery made a statement with regard to Prince Alexander and the Roumelian question.

April 14.—COMMONS. Mr. Bradlaugh's Land Cultivation Bill was, after some discussion, withdrawn, as also was the Police Constables' Pensions Bill.

April 15.—The Speaker read a letter from Sir Thomas Erskine May, resigning the office of Clerk to the House. The Chancellor of the Exchequer introduced the Budget. The revenue for the past year was less than the estimate by £1,208,699; the actual expenditure was £1,393,327 less than the estimate; and there was a deficit upon the year of £2,642,543. With regard to the ensuing year, the Chancellor of the Exchequer anticipated a deficit of rather more than £500,000. He also proposed to exempt cottage brewers from the tax of 4*s.* for licences, at a loss of £16,000. To meet the deficit, he proposed to take £818,000 from the Sinking Fund, which would give a surplus of rather more than £250,000, after providing for an estimated expenditure of £89,610,321.

April 16.—Mr. Gladstone moved for leave to introduce a Bill to make amended provision for the sale and purchase of land in Ireland, which would give the Irish landlords the option of being bought out. The measure authorized the issue of stock for that purpose to the amount of £50,000,000. Mr. Chamberlain made a further explanation of the reasons which led him to resign his position in the Cabinet. The Bill was read a first time.

April 19.—Committee on the Crofters' Bill.

May 3.—House reassembled after Easter recess. Committee of Supply: Civil Service Estimates.

May 4.—Discussions on Tobacco Duties, and Sir J. Pease's motion with regard to the Opium trade.

May 5.—Municipal Franchise (Ireland) Bill read a second time.

May 6.—Mr. Gladstone made statements as to the Greek question and the reorganization of the Egyptian army. The Railway and Canal Traffic Bill read a second time.

May 7.—The Charterhouse Bill, after short debate, withdrawn.

LORDS. The Marquis of Ripon answered question with regard to naval volunteers.

May 10.—Lord Rosebery announced that a commercial treaty had been signed with Spain. The Duke of Buckingham elected Chairman of Committees by 122 votes, against 103 for Lord Morley.

COMMONS. Mr. Gladstone moved the second reading of the Irish Home Rule Bill. He detailed the modifications he was prepared to make. With regard to the retention of the Irish members at Westminster, he favoured the appointment of a joint Commission, representing members of Parliament on both sides of the St. George's Channel. Lord Hartington moved the rejection of the Bill. Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett, Mr. Jordan, Lord Ebrington, and Mr. C. Lewis also spoke. The Crofters (Scotland) Bill read a third time.

May 11.—Sir J. Pease's resolution against capital punishment, after a debate, rejected by 117 votes to 62. Mr. Bartley's motion for a Committee of Inquiry into the levying of Income-tax negatived by 174 votes to 63.

LORDS. The Durham Sunday Closing Bill was read a second time by 47 votes to 41, after Lord Salisbury and Lord Bramwell had spoken against it.

May 12.—COMMONS. Returning Officers' Expenses (Ireland) Bill, Compulsory Purchase of Land Compensation Bill, and Beer Adulteration Bill read a second time.

May 13.—Debate on the Government of Ireland Bill continued by Sir Henry James, who argued that the measure would destroy the unity of the Empire. Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, on behalf of the Government, pointed out that the main principle of the Bill was the establishment of a representative body in Ireland, and said that any arrangement as to Irish representation in the Imperial Parliament must be consistent with the principle. Mr. E. Clarke, Mr. J. Redmond, Mr. Boyd-Kinnear, Lord G. Hamilton, Mr. Dillon, Mr. Leatham, and Mr. B. Coleridge also contributed to the debate.

LORDS. On the motion of the Archbishop of Canterbury the Church Patronage Bill was read a second time.

May 14.—COMMONS. Discussions on Trade Depression and Mining Royalties.

May 17.—Debate on the Government of Ireland Bill resumed by Sir R. Cross. Mr. Stansfeld contended that the Bill, if passed, would not destroy the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament, and that it would be a step in the direction of federation. Mr. Bryce replied to Constitutional questions that had been raised.

LORDS. Custody of Infants Bill read a second time.

May 18.—COMMONS. Debate on the Government of Ireland Bill continued; speeches by Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, Mr. Chaplin, Mr. Labouchere, and others.

LORDS. The Labourers (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill passed through Committee.

May 19.—COMMONS. Poor Law Guardians (Ireland) Bill and the Railway Regulation Bill (Mr. Channing's) read a second time.

May 20.—Mr. John Morley moved the second reading of the Irish Arms Bill; Mr. Parnell, Major Saunderson, Lord R. Churchill, Sir Hy. James, Mr. Healy, Mr. Bradlaugh, Sir M. Hicks-Beach, and Mr. Gladstone were amongst those who took part in the debate. The second reading was carried by 303 votes to 89.

LORDS. The Crofters (Scotland) Bill read a second time.

May 21.—The Durham Sunday Closing Bill passed through Committee, with an amendment, proposed by the Bishop of Durham, providing that the Act should come into operation in October, 1886, and expire in July, 1890.

COMMONS. Several questions were put to Mr. Gladstone as to the duration of the debate on the Irish Government Bill. Lord Hartington was ruled out of order by the Speaker, and Mr. Chamberlain ineffectually attempted to speak. Mr. Gladstone promised to make a statement later on. The debate was resumed by Mr. Justin McCarthy in a moderate and conciliatory speech, and Mr. Finlay continued with an adverse criticism of the measure. Amongst others who spoke were Mr. Serjeant Simon, Mr. J. F. O'Brien, Mr. McIver, Mr. Rathbone, Major Saunderson, and Mr. Childers.

May 24.—LORDS. The Duke of St. Albans moved the second reading of the Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister Bill. The Duke of Argyll moved its rejection. The Archbishop of Canterbury spoke against the measure, which was rejected by 149 votes to 127.

COMMONS. Supply: Proposal by Mr. Rylands to omit £5,000 for Secret Service rejected by 319 votes to 44.

May 25.—Mr. Labouchere's motion to adjourn over Derby Day carried by 251 votes to 150. Lord Lymington resumed debate on the Government of Ireland Bill, and was followed by the Attorney-General (Sir C. Russell), Mr. Westlake, Mr. Trevelyan, and Mr. Healy.

LORDS. The Durham Sunday Closing Bill rejected on the motion for the third reading by 97 votes to 70.

May 27.—COMMONS. The Arms (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee, after an amendment had been introduced by Mr. John Morley, providing that the Act should expire on December 31st, 1887.

LORDS. The Crofters (Scotland) Bill passed through Committee with amendments.

May 28.—COMMONS. Mr. Gladstone on being asked, if the Government of Ireland Bill was read a second time, what the intentions of the Government were with regard to an Autumn Session, and his reply being unsatisfactory to Sir M. Hicks-Beach, that gentleman moved the adjournment of the House. An animated discussion ensued, during which it was elicited that an early prorogation would be adopted. The Irish members insisted on a division on the motion, when one—Mr. Crilly—voted for the adjournment and 405 against. Debate on the second reading of the Government of Ireland Bill resumed; speeches by Mr. Rigby, Mr. Atherley-Jones, Mr. Fisher, Sir T. D. Acland, and Sir R. Webster.

May 31.—LORDS. The Arms (Ireland) Bill read a first time.

COMMONS. A meeting of Liberal dissidents held in a Committee-room under the presidency of Mr. Chamberlain. A letter was read from Mr. Bright, who stated that he would vote against the second reading of the Irish Government Bill. A resolution was passed by 45 to 3 against the second reading of the Bill.

In the House Mr. Sexton initiated a discussion on the Belfast Main Drainage Bill. Mr. H. H. Fowler resumed the debate on the Home Rule Bill. It was continued by Lord J. Manners, Mr. F. Stevenson, Col. Hughes Hallett, Mr. Storey, Mr. Macnaghten, and Mr. D. Gray.

June 1.—Lord Hartington presided over a meeting of his followers held in a Committee-room. It was decided to oppose the second reading of the Government of Ireland Bill.

In the House the debate on the Bill was resumed by Mr. Chamberlain, who announced that the amendments suggested by the Prime Minister did not meet his objections, therefore he felt it his duty to vote against the second reading. During his speech he was much interrupted. Mr. Sexton followed, and severely criticised the speech. Mr. Craig Sellar, Mr. Ince, and Mr. Magniac having spoken, Sir William Harcourt defended the principles of the Bill.

LORDS. The Arms (Ireland) Bill was read a second time, and subsequently, the Standing Orders having been suspended, it passed through Committee, and was read a third time.

June 2.—COMMONS. Debate on the second reading of the Registration of Voters (Ireland) Bill.

June 3.—Mr. T. P. O'Connor resumed the debate on the second reading of the Government of Ireland Bill. Mr. Winterbotham, Mr. Bradlaugh, Mr. McArthur, Mr. Wodehouse, Col. Nolan, and Sir J. Goldsmid also spoke. Mr. J. Morley, appealing to the dissentient Liberals, said the Government were anxious to consider any amendment, provided that it did not introduce anarchy on the working of the measure, or interfere with the real and substantial liberty and power of the legislative body in Dublin.

June 4.—Mr. Illingworth continued the debate, and was followed by Mr. Osborne Morgan, Sir J. Pease, Mr. Trotter, Col. King-Harman, Mr. Pickersgill, and Mr. Moulton.

LORDS. The Marquis of Salisbury took exception to Mr. J. Morley's interpretation of his recent reference to coercion for Ireland, and also to certain remarks by Mr. Blaine in the United States.

June 7.—COMMONS. Debate on the second reading of the Government of Ireland Bill concluded. Mr. Gladstone stated that the vote would be taken on the principle of establishing an Irish Parliament for the management of Irish affairs. Those who voted for the second reading would not pledge themselves to details. Amidst a scene of intense excitement the House divided, and the Government were defeated by 30 votes; 311 voting for the second reading and 341 against. This was the largest number of members that ever voted in the House. The House adjourned till Thursday the 10th.

June 8.—LORDS. International and Colonial Copyright Bill read a second time.

June 10.—Dissolution of Parliament announced in both Houses.

LORDS. The Earl of Carnarvon denied that he, as member of the late Conservative Government, had conveyed to Mr. Parnell "the intention of the Government to offer a statutory Parliament with power to protect Irish industries."

COMMONS. Supply: Navy Estimates.

June 11.—Army Estimates discussed. House adjourned for Whitsun recess.

June 12.—Mr. Gladstone issued his election manifesto.

June 16.—Returning Officers' Charges Bill read a third time.

June 17.—Sir Lyon Playfair made the annual statement with regard to education. Appropriation Bill read a second time.

June 18.—Statement with regard to French action in the New Hebrides.

LORDS. Several measures, including the Losses by Riot Compensation Bill, were advanced a stage.

June 21.—The Parliamentary Elections (Returning Officers) Act (1875) Amendment Bill read a second time, after the clause introduced by Mr. Labouchere in the House of Commons, charging the returning officer's expenses upon the rates, had been expunged.

COMMONS. The Appropriation Bill read a third time. The Indian Budget introduced.

June 22.—LORDS. The Shop Hours Regulation Bill passed through Committee, and the Appropriation Bill was read a second time.

June 23.—The Shop Hours Regulation Bill and several other Bills passed.

June 24.—A number of Bills passed through their final stages.

COMMONS. The Lords' amendments to the Parliamentary Elections (Returning Officers' Expenses) Bill and other Bills agreed to.

June 26.—Dissolution of Parliament.

The Twelfth Parliament of her Majesty's reign brought the Conservatives back to office, who, aided by the alliance of the "Unionist" Liberals, were for the short session masters of the situation. Owing to the excitement of the previous session, together with the lateness of the season—August 5—when Parliament first assembled, legislation, strictly speaking, was excluded from the Government's programme; and beyond passing a Bill appointing a Commission to inquire into the Belfast riots, and another repealing the Secret Service Money Act, no measure of importance was passed. The debate on the Address and Supply chiefly occupied the time of the House. Mr. Parnell's Bill for the relief of Irish tenants was debated for two nights, and then rejected by a majority of 95 votes.

August 5.—Parliament opened by Royal Commission.

COMMONS. Mr. A. Peel re-elected Speaker.

August 6.—Writs ordered to be issued for the re-election of Ministers.

LORDS. Her Majesty's approval given by commission to the election of Mr. Peel as Speaker.

August 10.—Parliament adjourned till 19th inst.

August 19.—LORDS. The Queen's Speech read by commission. The Address was moved by Lord De Ros, and seconded by the Earl of Onslow. Earl Granville inquired as to the Irish policy of the Government. The Marquis of Salisbury replied that time was necessary for inquiry and consideration. It was proposed to issue a Commission on the Irish Land Question. The Address agreed to, and the House adjourned to 30th inst.

COMMONS. Debate on Mr. Bradlaugh's motion that the Sessional Order against the intervention of peers in Parliamentary elections should not be renewed. Order confirmed by 294 votes to 126. The Address in reply to the Queen's Speech was moved by Col. King-Harman, and seconded by Mr. J. Maclean. Mr. Gladstone spoke at some length on the Irish Question, and was followed by Lord R. Churchill, who explained the future policy of the Government.

August 29.—The debate on the Address continued by Mr. T. P. O'Connor, Sir W. Harcourt, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Conybeare, and others.

August 23.—Mr. W. H. Smith made a statement with regard to alleged Ordnance scandals. Mr. Labouchere resumed the debate on the Address, and was followed by Sir M. Hicks-Beach, Mr. Bradlaugh, Mr. Illingworth, Lord Hartington, and Mr. J. Morley.

August 24.—Mr. Parnell moved an amendment to the Address in favour of stopping evictions in Ireland. After a speech from Mr. Plunket, Mr. Gladstone criticised at some length the Irish policy of the Government.

August 25.—The debate on the Address resumed by Sir T. Esmonde. Among the subsequent speakers were Mr. W. Redmond, Mr. Addison, Mr. Crilly, Mr. G. W. Balfour, Mr. Stewart, and Col. Saunderson, whose speech was frequently interrupted by the Nationalist members, the Speaker several times intervening.

August 26.—Mr. E. Russell moved the adjournment of the House to discuss the appointment of General Buller to a post in the South of Ireland. After a long discussion the motion was defeated by a majority of 95. Mr. Flynn resumed the debate on Mr. Parnell's amendment. Mr. Chamberlain and Sir C. Russell also spoke.

August 27.—Mr. Sexton continued the debate on Mr. Parnell's amendment, and was followed by Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, Sir W. Hart Dyke, Sir W. Harcourt, and Sir M. Hicks-Beach. On a division the amendment was rejected by 304 votes to 181.

August 30.—Two amendments respecting the annexation of Burmah were negatived by majorities of 76 and 73.

LORDS. The Queen's reply to the Address in answer to the Speech from the Throne brought up by the Earl of Mount-Edgcumbe.

August 31.—COMMONS. Discussion on the crofters' grievances. Mr. Esslemont moved an amendment, which was rejected by 203 to 121.

September 1.—Mr. Sexton moved his amendment to the Address, insisting that the most imperative and urgent measures were necessary for the maintenance of social order in Belfast. He quoted extracts from a speech made by Lord R. Churchill at Belfast in order to show that the noble lord was in some way responsible for incitement to disorder. This was denied by Sir M. Hicks-Beach, and the discussion was carried on till the adjournment of the House at 6 o'clock.

September 2.—The debate on Mr. Sexton's amendment was resumed, during which Col. Saunderson was twice called to order by the Speaker. Speeches were delivered by Mr. J. Morley, Col. Waring, Mr. H. Campbell, Mr. Macartney, Mr. W. Redmond (who was required by the Speaker to withdraw and apologize for an expression), Mr. W. A. Macdonald, Mr. Biggar, and Sir W. Harcourt. The amendment was ultimately rejected by 225 to 128, and the Address was agreed to.

LORDS. Earl Cadogan stated that the Government had a return of 28 deaths in connection with the Belfast riots.

September 3.—COMMONS. Report on Address finally disposed of.

September 6.—Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates.

LORDS. The Secret Service Money Repeal Bill read a first time.

September 7.—COMMONS. Army Estimates discussed and remaining votes agreed to.

September 8.—Navy Estimates considered in Committee of Supply.

September 9.—Supply: Civil Service and Revenue Votes discussed.

September 10.—Mr. Parnell formally introduced the Irish Tenants' Relief Bill.

September 13.—Lord R. Churchill announced the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the working of the Civil Service.

LORDS. The Secret Service Money Repeal Bill read a second time.

September 14.—COMMONS. Sir J. Fergusson made a statement with regard to the abdication of Prince Alexander of Bulgaria.

September 15.—Belfast Disturbances Inquiry Bill read a third time.

September 16.—Civil Service Estimates further discussed in Committee of Supply.

September 17.—Supply: Irish Constabulary Votes obtained, and the Estimates finished.

September 18.—The Appropriation Bill introduced.

September 20.—Mr. Parnell moved the second reading of the Tenants' Relief (Ireland) Bill. Mr. P. Fitzgerald moved an adverse amendment. Mr. Gladstone spoke on the Bill, and was followed by Mr. Matthews.

September 21.—The Appropriation Bill passed through Committee. Mr. J. Morley resumed the debate on the Tenants' Relief Bill, which he supported. He was followed by Mr. Chaplin, the Marquis of Hartington, Sir M. Hicks-Beach, and Mr. Dillon. The second reading was rejected by 297 votes to 202. The amendment was agreed to without a division.

September 22.—The Appropriation Bill read a third time.

LORDS. The Appropriation Bill read a first time.

September 23.—The Appropriation Bill passed through remaining stages.

September 24.—Parliament formally prorogued by Commission to November 11th, and subsequently to January 13, 1887, when it is to meet for the despatch of business.

Foreign Food Imported.

YEAR by year the people of this country become more dependent upon foreign countries for their supplies of food. The following table, prepared from returns issued by the Commercial Department of the Board of Trade, shows the value of live animals—cattle, sheep, and pigs—imported; also the value of fresh, salted, and preserved meat, including ham, bacon, butter, cheese, eggs, and vegetables; the wheat and flour; grain, as oats, Indian corn, barley, rye, meal, hops, rice, sago, and sugar; and fruits (raw), nuts, and vegetables (raw) for the years 1866-1885, with the totals for every year and the amount per head of the population. This, it will be seen, has varied from 41*s.* 9*d.* to 86*s.* 7*d.* The number of live cattle imported rose from 136,688 in 1868 to 474,750 in 1883; of sheep from 341,155 in 1868 to 1,124,391 in 1882. The number of pigs has varied from 15,670 to 115,389.

ALTHOUGH the following List of Fairs may yet contain a few errors, the Editor has endeavoured to make it correct, and in doing so gave much trouble to several hundred correspondents, whose obliging help he has much pleasure in acknowledging.

When the Fair Day falls on Sunday, the Fair is usually held on the following Monday.
